NATIONAL PARK, WASHINGTON, D. C., April 12.—Reciprocity, Lorimer and all the other men and things that have been in the minds of the Washington public through the long Winter were forgotten to-day, for the American League baseball season is on.

All Washington had an engagement this afternoon at the Florida avenue grounds, where Manager McAleer's Nationals hooked up in the opening game with Pat Donovan's brave Red Sox from Boston. The game brought together two of the fastest pitchers in the country, the great Walter Johnson and the mighty youngster, Joe Wood. In that announcement there was promise enough that the contest would be bitterly fought and that the winning team will have to play all the baseball it knows.

The Red Sox are out for the pennant. Washington's ambition has been tempered by long years of second division teams, but to the minds of the fans McAleer's team has a great chance to finish somewhere. So the battle was for blood. The Boston boys were as confident of winning as they are of finishing in the first division, but they realized that it would take baseball to beat Johnson and they went into the game determined to give the best they have. They have confidence in young Wood and believe he will prove unbeatable if his support holds.

Taft Was On Deck.

President Taft promised to witness the game and to toss out the first ball. He is a rabid baseball fan, but an impartial one. He let it be known that he would be as pleased with a Boston victory as with a triumph for Washington because he was assured that the contest would be a real one and that it would take good ball playing to win.

Manager Donovan's team was not in as good shape as the leader would like to have it, but it was full of fight. Carrigan, Boston's star catcher, is out of the game. In his place was Madden, and the latter was bound to try all the harder to make the club as strong as it would be with the veteran in the fray. Speaker, the wonderful slugger and outfielder, has been ill, but took his health into his own hands and started the game in the face of his physician's warning.

The pitching staff was ready. This fact was pleasing to Donovan and to the whole team. There are five reliable box men in shape to go the full route, and if anything happened to Wood this afternoon the club had worthy substitutes.

Johnson signed at his own terms only the other day, after a long siege of holding out. The club gave in to him, and he will serve it to the best of his ability. McAleer has reconstructed the right side of his infield and believes he has made the Nationals a stronger aggregation. But the Red Sox also believe themselves stronger, and they can see nothing but victory in the opening series.

The officials of the Washington club have been on the jump since fire destroyed the old stands last month. They have succeeded in putting in a new structure, which is capable of holding the big crowd that attended this, the opening game. Washington has the baseball fever in its acute stage, and the game was the only thing discussed to-day on the streets of the Capital.

SOUTH END GROUNDS, April 12.—Batter up! This is the day that brings joy to the heart of man, woman and child, the day that the millions of followers of baseball have been awaiting with eager impatience ever since the curtain was rung down last October on the final scene of the 1910 season.

The National League season opened at the South End Grounds this afternoon with Fred Tenney's brand new Rustlers and Bill Dahlen's remodelled Dodgers as opponents.

The bright sun tried its hardest to please Boston fans, but its task of shining was started a few days too late to be entirely satisfactory. There was a chilliness about the air could not be overlooked. But a little thing like a cold day did not keep the real lovers of the game from flocking to the Walpole street grounds to witness the great battle between Rustlers and Dodgers. There was a big crowd. There would have been one even if no attraction were offered other than a common ball game. As it was, there were several things on the program and connected with the affair that helped to swell the attendance.

Treat for the Fans.

Followers of the Rustlers were promised a special treat. It was the sight of a ball club they would not be ashamed of—one which possesses a real ball playing ability and which will make every opponent fight to the limit.

The grounds were not in the best of shape. They still contained the frost of Winter and the gaze of the sun served only to make them a bit muddy. Little did the fans care for this. They knew that the ball players themselves were in condition and that fact was all that mattered.

To Al Mattern, rated as one of the three best left handers in the National League, fell the task of pitching the opening game for the tribe of Tenney. In reserve was "Buster" Brown. The two were fit and that meant that Brooklyn would not win without knowing it had been in a ball game.

Manager Dahlen's first choice was Cy Barger, the tall, slender right hander who made good with a jump in the big league last season. The portly George Bell was second choice. These two and Rucker are Brooklyn's star pitchers and the man selected had to use every bit of his pitching knowledge and ability in the effort to down the Rustler crowd.

Graham Still Unsigned.

After a long conference last night the Rustler management was unable to agree with "Peaches" Graham and this morning he was still unsigned. So it was decided to let Rariden catch the game. This was disappointing news to baseball followers, because they are sure to miss Graham.

However, one player more or less does not interfere with baseball inaugurals. Governor Eugene N. Foss, Lieutenant-Governor Louis A. Frothingham, who was captain of a baseball team at Harvard; members of the Governor's council and of his staff, members of the Legislature and of the city administration were invited and they were present in large numbers. Mayor John F. Fitzgerald limbered up his arm this morning so as to be ready to throw out the first ball.

A parade was arranged for the Boston and Brooklyn teams. They started directly in front of the grand stand and marched to the centre field flagpole. Here Manager Fred Tenney, for Boston, and Manager Dahlen, for Brooklyn, raised a new American flag. Then Brooklyn started off the batting. Boston took the field and the game started.

The National League grounds have been improved since last season and made a better appearance. The grounds were in much better condition than might be expected after Sunday's snow storm. The clubhouses are in excellent shape. The entrances, fences and grand stand are better.

The American Cadet Band and orchestra was out to play a concert before and after the game.

President Lynch Here.

One of the chief notables in the city was President Thomas J. Lynch of the National League, who selected Boston as the place to be for the opening of the season. He is the guest of President William Hepburn Russell and Vice-President L. C. Page of the team. Treasurer Fred J. Murphy and Manager Tenney also had several prominent guests. The players themselves were the guests of President Russell at the Thorndike last night.

All the heads of the Boston Nationals were jubilant to-day over the great improvement of the Nationals over last year. They decided that they would give Boston an entirely new article of baseball this year.

DORCHESTER CHILD SLAIN BY MOTHER

Marjorie Russell.

CHILD WAS STRANGLED BY HER INSANE PARENT

Woman Tells How She Killed Little One After Desperate Struggle—Thought It Best to End Child's Life.

Mrs. Clara Russell early to-day strangled to death her twelve-year-old daughter, Marjorie, at their home No. 1,191 Washington street, Dorchester, while the little girl pleaded with her mother not to harm her, and then fought desperately for her life.

No more pathetic tragedy ever took place in Boston. Several occurrences served to torture the mother's mind and work her into such a mental state that the police believe she did not appreciate the enormity of her fearful act.

WOMAN HAD BEEN IN SANITARIUM

No more pathetic tragedy ever took place in Boston. Several occurrences served to torture the mother's mind and work her into such a mental state that the police believe she did not appreciate the enormity of her fearful act.

Mrs. Russell had been treated two months ago in a sanitarium, but she had been discharged as cured. Her brother-in-law, Gilbert Munroe, was in consultation with a clergyman and some other friends as to the propriety of separating the mother and daughter. This separation was to have taken place to-day. It is believed that the mother heard of it and that this was one of the contributing causes for her act.

Marjorie yesterday returned from school and told her mother that she had been reprimanded for some act. Yesterday was also the anniversary of the birth of Mrs. Russell's dead son. He would have been eighteen. This anniversary had always been a painful one to the mother since the boy's death.

Mrs. Russell confessed to the police that she strangled her daughter to death with a towel. She told Mr. Munroe that she had done it when he called at the house about 7 o'clock. Munroe went into the street and got Patrolman Lawrence Foley. They returned to the house, and while the patrolman waited outside the door Mrs. Russell repeated her story of how she had strangled her daughter, so that the patrolman heard it.

Locked Up on Charge of Murder.

Then he placed her under arrest and took her to the Eleventh Precinct station house, where she was locked up on the charge of murder.

Mrs. Russell is about forty-five years old. She is the wife of George S. Russell, who is employed in Lowell. The husband and wife have not been living together for four or five years. She conducted a small hand laundry, supporting herself and daughter.

Her brother-in-law, Mr. Munroe, lives at No. 15 Millers lane, which is immediately in the rear of the house occupied by Mrs. Russell. Mr. Munroe said to-day:

"I am employed by Mr. Gannett, who runs a feed store just across from Mrs. Russell's house. Yesterday I put in a grate for her. This morning, as I was passing the house about 7 o'clock, she had

DIAZ SUBMITS PEACE TERMS

LAREDO, Texas, April 12.—A peace commission reached General Madero's camp, west of Bustillos in the state of Chihuahua, to-day, bearing the terms of the Diaz government. The insurrecto commander-in-chief called a council of his officers to consider the peace pact.

The preliminaries are unofficial, but are looked upon as possibly opening a way for more direct negotiations between Senor Madero and Mexico City. Federico Moye, a merchant, went to Mexico City, where, he says, he held a conference with government officials relative to peace. Minister Limantour is said to have been one of those consulted.

Senor Moye was told that the government already had made great concessions, and it was hinted that even greater changes pertaining to the presidency and vice-presidency were discussed.

Hurrying to Chihuahua, Senor Moye was joined by Dr. J. R. Heyffert, and to-day they drove in an automobile to Madero's camp. Meantime the telegraph wires of Chihuahua were hooked up with those in the field controlled by Madero, and messages were sent advising the insurrectos' leader of the coming of the messengers.

So eager was Senor Madero to hear proposals that he halted in his march to Casas Grandes region, and with a force of men returned to a point near Bustillos. The meeting took place as Madero sat, surrounded by his staff.

Asked on what terms he would conclude peace, Senor Madero said he only could repeat demands already made.

WINTHROP MAY SEEK MORE PARKER TAXES

An inventory of the estate of the late Benjamin W. Parker, a molasses broker at No. 11 Central street and living in Winthrop, was filed in the Suffolk County Probate Court to-day and shows he was worth $560,697. As he was assessed in Winthrop only on $9,450 worth of property, action may be taken by that town to recover the difference in taxes from the executors of the estate. Parker owned stock in forty-five corporations, his personal estate totalling $528,546 and his real estate $32,151.

FEAR TRIBESMEN HAVE SLAIN BRITISH

CALCUTTA, April 12. Fears are felt for the safety of the expedition under Deputy Commissioner Bentick of the military police, which set out to punish the Abor tribesmen who murdered Noel Williamson, a brother official, and his party on the Assam frontier last week. No news has been received of the party since it left and it is feared the members have been ambushed and killed.

CONTINUE HUNT FOR MOMAND

The Finance Commission to-day instructed Secretary J. C. L. Dowling and Constable Robert Reid to keep up the search for R. Momand, who made charges in connection with the bids for furnishing the city with 12,000 lamps for streets and alleys. The Finance Commission set yesterday afternoon for a hearing at which Mr. Momand could tell about his charges.

The commissioners and Public Works Commissioner Rourke were on hand, but Constable Reid reported that Momand had disappeared from the Parker House. He did not appear and the hearing was indefinitely postponed. Momand says he is vice-president of the Pressure Lighting Company. It was learned at City Hall to-day that Momand in 1906 got into an argument with the lighting committee of the Providence City Council in a matter of bidding for an 850-lamp contract, but the committee there refused to have anything to do with him or his bid.

MATTY BALDWIN PAYS $7.60 FOR A KNOCKOUT

WOONSOCKET, April 12.—Matty Baldwin, the Charlestown boxer, got into an altercation in Monument square last night with a big man, a stranger to him. Matty passed a left hook to the jaw of his antagonist, who went down and out. Matty was arrested by Patrolman Auclaire. The victim failed to appear against Baldwin in the Twelfth District Court this morning and the boxer was charged with "revelling" and fined $5 and costs, aggregating $7.60. It was paid.

CHAMBER TO HOLD MEETING TUESDAY

A special meeting of the Boston Chamber of Commerce is to be held in the reading room of the Chamber building next Tuesday at 3:30 p. m. to consider the federal income tax. A meeting to-day was called, following a petition filed by Moorfield Story, James J. Myers and sixteen other members. Those who have asked for the meeting are said not to oppose a federal income tax properly safeguarded, but believe that the amendment now being considered is full of inequalities. Several other matters are to be considered at Tuesday's meeting relative to changes in the by-laws of the chamber.

FORMER MAYOR ENDS LIFE BY SHOOTING

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., April 12.—Jacob W. Clute, a prominent lawyer and former Mayor of Schenectady, committed suicide to-day by shooting.

B. & A. AGAINST ELECTRIFICATION

To electrify the Boston & Albany passenger trains on the Newton circuit and from Boston to South Framingham would mean an increase of the fares of 40 per cent., declares James A. Hustis, assistant general manager of the road. The cost of completing the electrification, Mr. Hustis told the Massachusetts legislative Committees on Railroads and Metropolitan Affairs to-day, would be $6,412,300. As the operation of the road is now conducted with a deficit and the electric railway competition prevents the increasing of fares, it is practically impossible for the road to consider a change at this time.

BRITISH AVIATOR CROSSES CHANNEL

LONDON, April 12.—Aviator Prior left London to-day in an attempt to fly to Paris without making a stop. The start was made from Hendon, North London, and the route chosen by the aviator lies over Chatham, Canterbury, thence over the English Channel and to Paris by way of Bologne. Word was received that he had passed over Dover, flying easily.

A later dispatch from Boulogne stated that Prier had crossed the channel successfully and passed that town. He was 2,000 feet in the air and going at the rate of thirty miles an hour.

MARTIN RECOGNIZES THE PROGRESSIVES

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 12.—The new Democratic Senate steering committee appointed by Senator Martin, caucus leader, held its first meeting to-day. The committee, which consists of nine members, is not only a steering committee, but the committee on committees. Five of the nine members are generally rated as progressives. They are Culberson, Clarke, Williams, Kern and Hitchcock.

FEDERAL INSURANCE OF LETTERS URGED

Federal insurance of important letters was advocated to-day by F. Arthur Stone, postmaster at St. Johnsbury, Vt., speaking to 200 postmasters at the annual convention of the Postmasters' Association of New England in the American House. He also urged the return of the old registry system. Third Assistant Postmaster-General James J. Britt will be the guest of the association at a banquet to-night.

LABOR PROTESTS BIENNIALS

An emphatic protest against enactment of the biennial election measure now before the Legislature was sent to the members of the House and the Senate to-day by the executive committee of the Boston Central Labor Union.

RECIPROCITY BILL IN HOUSE

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Representative Underwood, the Democratic leader, as soon as the House met to-day introduced the Democratic Canadian reciprocity bill, which is, with a minor exception, the same as the McCall bill introduced at the last session.

The only change in the bill from the McCall measure is a clause asking the President to negotiate with Canada in order to obtain, if possible, further concessions.

At the same time Chairman Underwood introduced a bill placing various articles on the free list.

With the exception of the introduction of the Canadian reciprocity bill and the Democratic measure placing articles used by the farmers on the free list the House transacted no important business to-day. Adjournment was taken after thirty minutes with half of the House membership expecting to see the opening ball game between the Washington and Boston clubs.

The bill provides for the removal of the duty on numerous articles which were rated under the Payne-Aldrich act, putting on the free list all agricultural implements, sewing machines, cotton bagging and ties, wire hoops and band from grain to fine leather, bridles and harness, dressed and undressed meats, flour and corn meal, timber, lumber except hardwood, salt and other products.

This free list was agreed upon by the Democratic caucus which was held last night, and according to the view of the Democrats will recompense the farmer for any inequalities that may be disadvantageous to him in the Canadian reciprocity agreement.

MEXICO BARRED U. S. NAVY GUN PRACTICE

WASHINGTON, April 12.—One interesting fact was brought out in disclosures which President Taft made to members of Congress to-day with respect to his course in Mexican matters. This is that Mexico refused to allow American war vessels to continue target practice at Magdalena Bay on the southwest coast of lower California. This is clearly shown in the correspondence and documents revealed to members of the House and Senate, who talked over the situation in Mexico with the President to-day.

CHICAGO GETS BIG TELEPHONE MERGER

CHICAGO, April 12.—Through a big telephone deal which was announced to-day, Chicago will become the largest telephone operating headquarters in the country, being the operating office for the Bell Telephone business in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan and Wisconsin.

USE BLOODHOUNDS IN SEARCH FOR WOMAN

PHILADELPHIA, April 12.—State police with bloodhounds to-day began searching for Miss Lydia Mason, a young society woman who mysteriously disappeared from her family's country estate last night. Foul play is feared.

FATHER OF DAVID BELASCO IS DEAD

SAN FRANCISCO, April 12.—Abram Belasco, father of David Belasco, the noted playright and theatrical manager, is dead at his home in this city. He was eighty years old. Fifty years ago he came around the Horn and located in California.

GETS YEAR FOR THEFT.

James D. Ferritor was to-day sentenced in Dorchester Court to serve one year at Deer Island. Miss Julia M. Buckley was about to enter St. William's Church, when Ferritor seized her handbag.

FOUR OVERCOME BY GAS FUMES

A mother and her three children were overcome by gas in their home in Jamaica Plain to-day. A doctor worked over them for two hours before they were revived. The victims were Mrs. Pauline Steier and her children, Pauline 7, Frederick 4 and Herbert 2. They lived on the first floor of the tenement at No. 390 Amory street, Jamaica Plain.

Fred J. Larkin, who lives in the same house, smelled gas about 9 a. m. He traced the odor to the first floor. He called to Mrs. Steier, but could not get an answer, and broke down the door.

In a chamber he found the mother and children unconscious on the bed. The gas cock in the room was half open.

When Mrs. Steier recovered sufficiently to talk, she said that she had hung clothing on the gas pipe last night, that she got up early and took it off, and then went back to bed. It is believed that she opened the jet when she removed the clothes.

BRYAN A BEARER AT JOHNSON FUNERAL

CLEVELAND, O., April 12.—William Jennings Bryan will be one of the pall bearers at the funeral of ex-Mayor Tom L. Johnson in Brooklyn to-morrow. Other pall bearers will be C. M. Bates, Ben T. Cable, Lincoln Steffens, A. J. Moxam, Congressman Henry George, Jr., August Lewis and Bishop Brennan. Brief funeral services were conducted at the Johnson home late this afternoon by the Rev. Dr. H. R. Cooley before the body was sent east over the Lake Shore Railroad at 6:10 o'clock.

MAN STRANGELY SHOT IN HOME OF WOMAN

NEW YORK, April 12.—In a mysterious shooting affray in the home of Mrs. Lulu Brod at No. 6915 Fort Hamilton avenue, Bay Ridge, to-day, Isidor Bagushaw, a bookkeeper, was wounded twice in the abdomen and was taken to the Norwegian Hospital in a dying condition. At the hospital Bagushaw made an ante mortem statement in which he said Mrs. Brod had shot him because he refused to marry her.

BOLD DAYLIGHT GEM THEFT IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, April 12.—While thousands passed by in the streets outside three bold thieves to-day robbed the pawnshop of J. I. Reis, at No. 309 Third avenue, of $3,000 worth of diamonds and escaped. After getting out of the shop the thieves placed a wedge under the doors which swung upward, prevented their being opened and keeping those inside the place prisoners.

MOTORMAN GETS $5,000 L VERDICT

A verdict for $5,000 was returned to-day by a jury in the first session, Suffolk Superior Civil Court, for Matthew Corsick, for injuries received as the result of a collision in the East Boston Tunnel caused by a defective air brake. Corsick was a motorman for the L at the time of the accident.

FINED IN SMUGGLING CASE.

George L. Andrews of Roxbury, to-day retracted a plea of not guilty and pleaded guilty in the United States District Court to conspiring to smuggle Chinese into this country. He was fined $200 and costs and then placed on his personal recognizance for $300.

HELD AS "WHITE SLAVER."

Louis Russell, twenty-six, of No. 22 Compton street, was arraigned on a "white slave" charge in the municipal court to-day. He was held in $1,000 for the Grand Jury. Russell's alleged victim was his wife, Honora.

DORCHESTER WOMAN KILLS GIRL

Mother's Mind Unbalanced by Trouble, She Strangles Daughter.

her head out of the window. I called up to her.

"'How does the grate work?'

"'Fine,' she replied. 'I wish you would come up. I want you to deliver some laundry for me.'

"I went upstairs. Everything seemed unusually quiet. I missed Marjorie.

"'Where is Marjorie?' I asked.

"'Marjorie's dead,' Mrs. Russell replied.

"'Why, what happened to Marjorie?' I asked.

"'I strangled her with a towel between 2 and 3 o'clock this morning,' Mrs. Russell answered.

"'Why did you do such an awful thing?' I asked her.

"'She was insulted in school yesterday,' the woman replied, 'and I thought that it would be better for her to be dead than to be insulted in that way.'

"I told her that I wanted to go into the street for a short time, and when I walked across the street I met Policeman Foley. I told him what had happened. Foley accompanied me back to the house and asked me to go inside the room and ask her all the questions over again about how she across the street I met Policeman Foley remained outside the door, listening to what she said. She told the same story that she had told me before, confessing that she had murdered Marjorie.

"Foley and I then went into the bedroom and Marjorie lay in bed just as her mother had left her. She was dead. There was evidence about the bed to indicate that Marjorie had made a struggle for her life. But the poor little girl could not withstand the fury of her mother.

"Marjorie came to my home yesterday afternoon when she had returned from school and told us about it being the anniversary of her dead brother's birth. Marjorie said:

"Mamma Always Cries."

"'To-day is Freddie's eighteenth birthday. I hope mamma doesn't hear about it. She always cries on this day. It makes her feel so bad, and it makes me feel bad too. Please don't remind her of the date.'"

Mrs. Russell was formerly Miss Clara Svenson. At one time she was employed in the family of Mrs. J. H. Walcott, the mother of the former Governor of Massachusetts. She was married about nineteen years ago. Her son Fred was buried about seven years ago. The death of the boy preyed on the woman's mind.

Marjorie was a pretty little girl and a bright student. She attended the Gilbert Stuart School. She was unusually sensitive because of the fact that her father and mother were living apart, and on several occasions when she got into little quarrels with her school friends they were apt to make remarks about troubles in her family.

Mrs. Russell was treated last January by Dr. A. L. Draper for trouble that resulted in him sending her to a sanitarium in Milton. She was there a few weeks and then was discharged cured. Mr. Gilbert was of the opinion that her mental condition was such that it would be better to separate her and her daughter.

Put in Charge of Matron.

When Mrs. Russell was taken to the police station she seemed to be rational. She was put in charge of the matron, Mrs. James F. McIntyre. Mrs. Russell told the whole story of the tragedy to Police Captain Hall.

Police Captain Hall told a reporter of the AMERICAN the following story of the crime:

"I talked with Mrs. Russell and she told me all about how she killed her daughter. She said:

"'My husband has been living away from me for some time. We live on the second floor of the house, and I and my daughter have been sleeping in the same bed. This morning about 2 o'clock it came to me in some way that it would be best to kill Marjorie. I got up and went to the bathroom and got a towel.

"'I went back to the bed and Marjorie lay asleep. I looked at her a moment, and then I pulled her over toward the edge of the bed and put the towel around her and began to tighten it about the neck.

"Marjorie Began to Cry."

"'Marjorie awoke. She began to cry. She pleaded with me not to harm her. She said that she loved me. But I could not stop when I got started. I don't know what possessed me to do the deed.

"'There was my little daughter pleading with me not to harm her, and yet it seemed to me that the best thing that I could do for her was to end her life. Marjorie and I struggled for a long time. It must have been ten or fifteen minutes before she was still, and I knew then that she was dead.

"'Marjorie did not scream, but pleaded with me while tears streamed down her face not to hurt her. I was stronger than she was. No one heard us, and shortly after I knew that Marjorie was dead a relative of ours came to the house. He said that he wanted to see Marjorie. I asked him what he wanted to see her for. He said he just wanted to see her. I told him that she was dead. He asked me what I meant. I said that she was dead and that I had killed her.

"Best Thing to End Her Life."

"'The man then ran away from the house. That is all that I can tell you about how Marjorie died. You ask me why I did it. The only thing that I can say is that I loved her and I thought the best thing that I could do was to end her life.

"'I was not happy. My husband lived away from me. I knew that if Marjorie grew up she would have great trouble, and so to save her from this great trouble I thought the best thing to do would be to kill her.

"'Marjorie was a good girl. Every night before she went to sleep she knelt at the bedside and said her prayers. She prayed for me and for her father. She loved me and loved her father. She was always hoping that her father would return home. It may be that the fact that he was away and that Marjorie wanted him to come back got on my mind and had something to do with my taking her life.

"'Poor little girl. She is dead now. She was a sweet daughter. She was a good girl. But I thought I was doing right.

Girl Pleaded for Life.

"'It was an awful thing to have to fight with Marjorie the way I did last night at midnight. I thought that I could put an end to her life without her waking up, and then she waked and seemed to realize what I was doing. She pleaded with me, using all the endearing terms that she knew. But although I loved my daughter it seemed to me that it was far better for me to take her away from this world of worry and care.

"'What will they do with me now? I hardly care what they do with me. I thought I was doing right and that is all I have to say.'"

Mrs. Russell was locked up in the station house of the Eleventh district and a charge of murder was placed against her name. Chief Dugan of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation was notified and a charge of murder was placed against her name. Chief Dugan of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation was notified and went immediately to Dorchester to look into the tragedy.

The news of the crime soon spread through the Pierce square district of Dorchester, and a great crowd gathered in the streets in front of the house in which the girl was killed.

The medical examiner was notified and he hastened to the scene to make arrangements to take care of the little girl's body.

Chief James Dugan of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation put Mrs. Russell through a severe examination at the Dorchester police station. To an AMERICAN reporter he said:

"There is no doubt in my mind as to the insanity of Mrs. Russell. She told me that she had contemplated this act for three or four weeks. I understand that at one time she was an inmate of a convalescent home in Dorchester, suffering from some nervous trouble.

To Be Arraigned To-morrow.

"She said the murder was committed sometime between 2 and 3 o'clock this morning, and that immediately after her child was dead she went about her work preparing laundry for a number of her customers. Throughout her examination by me she was cool and collected. She did not break down. She told me that she was guilty and that she wanted to be punished for it. When asked why she committed the deed she said:

"'I thought that my daughter was better out of the way.'"

As Judge Churchill had already left the court Mrs. Russell will not be arraigned until to-morrow morning. The case will then be continued until next week. Alienists in the meantime will examine her. Chief Dugan will communicate with the District Attorney's office and the case will be handled by them.

Medical Examiner Leary said that in his opinion the examination of the body at the house showed that the girl died from strangulation. Captain Hall said that Mrs. Russell was the same woman that was found about a year ago sitting in a snow bank near her home. At that time she was suffering from some nervous trouble.

TO-DAY'S CABLE NEWS

Up to Midnight London Time

Million Dollars' Worth of Champagne Ruined.

PARIS—Additional troops were to-day sent into the valley of the Marne to reinforce the dragoons there, following a wild night of rioting by discontented wine growers who have destroyed over $1,000,000 worth of champagne. The threatening conditions, which were caused by the French Parliament restricting the territory whose product of wine might be labelled champagne, will probably have to be dealt with severely by the government before order is restored. The streets of Damery and Epernay literally ran rivers of wine to-day.

New Record by Mauretania.

LONDON—The Mauretania, with a large crowd on board, marking the early beginning of the American coronation invasion, reached Liverpool some hours late, owing to the delay caused by fog at New York. The liner was unable to call at Fishguard because of bad weather, but had an excellent passage, creating a new record for a day's run. This was from noon Friday to noon Saturday, during which time 614 knots were covered.

Portuguese Bishops Yield.

LISBON—It is stated that all the bishops of Portugal, having received instructions from the Pope to accept the separation of Church and State, have notified the provisional government of their acceptance of the new situation, in view of the government stipulating life pensions for all the clergy according to the positions they held.

Liberal Member Unseated.

LONDON—As a result of a scrutiny of the votes cast in Exeter at the last election another Liberal member of the House of Commons, Richard Harold St. Maur, has been unseated. Henry Edward Duke, formerly Unionist member, was declared elected by a majority of one.

Herbert Singer Acquitted.

NICE—Herbert Singer, of the American family of sewing machine millionaires, has been acquitted of the charge of assault brought against him by a bellboy in a hotel at Beausoleil. The evidence pointed to an attempt to blackmail Singer.

Bringing Knowles's Body Home.

LIMA, Peru—Horace G. Knowles, the United States Minister to Bolivia, accompanied by Mrs. Knowles, sailed from Callao for Panama with the body of their son Malcolm, who was killed recently in a trolley car accident at La Paz.

Guenther Thomas Ill.

BERLIN—Guenther Thomas, Berlin representative of the New York Staats-Zeitung, has been successfully operated upon for appendicitis by the celebrated surgeon, Professor Eschenbach.

MISS ANNA K. LEAF, SCHOOL GIRL WHO LEADS IN QUINCY

ANNA K LEAF

Such a fuss is being made because a Harvard professor has solved the mystery of the Sphinx.

Here's a real mystery for Dr. Reisner of Harvard? Who's going to win the capital prize, the $8,000 house and two lots in the AMERICAN'S great $35,000 Prize Contest?

If the learned Dr. Reisner could answer that question right off the bat he would relieve the anxiety of some thousands of candidates in this contest. But he can't. Nor can anybody else. Not even the Contest Editor himself can tell that. No one will know till next June.

But next June isn't so terribly far off at that. In about nine weeks this contest will be over and the winners will be known. Candidates can see with half an eye that there is no time to sit around wondering who is going to win. The one thing to do from now till June 15 is to hustle for votes and especially for votes by subscription.

The last list of candidates' standing shows that Anna K. Leaf of Quincy leads all other Quincy candidates. Anna is easily in the first fifty candidates in District Two. She is a thirteen-year-old schoolgirl. She attends the John Hancock Grammar School in Quincy and is one of the most energetic competitors in the district. Her father is helping her in the campaign, assisted by numerous friends.

This Spring vacation time gives school boys and girls who are candidates extra opportunity to pile up votes. Most all boys and girls have some duties that they have to attend to out of school. Some work a few hours to get pocket money. Others help at home. But practically all have some time to themselves. It is this spare time which should be used to the utmost to get votes and subscriptions.

Maybe some young candidate like this will win the capital prize. In fact, a boy is the all-New England leader for it now, young Thomas G. Sullivan of Roxbury. He is only fifteen years old. That shows what a juvenile candidate can do.

JEWS OBSERVE THE PASSOVER

The setting of the sun to-night, marks for Jews all over the world the beginning of the Feast of Passover, and the observance of religious traditions which have been handed down for 3,000 years in commemoration of the intercession and of the final deliverance from the yoke of the Egyptians.

To-morrow morning services will be held in all the temples and in the synagogues.

The Jewish people closed business early to-day and will not resume it until Friday.

The Boston United Moeth Chitim Association together with officers of the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society, have arranged with Commissioner of Immigration George B. Billings, that the Jews detained on Long Wharf be allowed to celebrate the Passover in accordance with their religious customs.

FIND CHECKS IN LORIMER FUND

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., April 12.—Three checks, totalling nearly $50,000, are said to have been found by investigators for the Helm committee and to have been proved to be a part of the collections of the $100,000 Lorimer corruption fund.

John J. Healy, who is attorney for the Helm committee refused to discuss the subject of subpoenas. He has been furnished with blank subpoenas which he fills on and serves at will.

Chairman Helm, in Springfield, refused to answer a question as to whether Mr. Shedd and the banker had been subpoenaed.

When Your Back Aches Suspect the Kidneys

Backache is kidney ache in most cases. The kidneys ache and throb with dull pain because there is inflammation within. You can't be rid of the ache until you cure the cause—the kidneys. There is no better recommended remedy than Doan's Kidney Pills.

Miss Sarah A. Berry, trained nurse, 100A Main St., Malden, Mass., says: "In my profession as a trained nurse many cases of kidney disorder come to my notice. I have found Doan's Kidney Pills to be an excellent remedy in relieving the conditions arising from such disorders. They seem to act as a general regulator and tonic for almost every symptom of these derangements. I have no hesitation in giving Doan's Kidney Pills my endorsement."

MRS. HETTY GREEN; SHE'LL WEAR THE OLD HAT AT EASTER

NEW YORK, April 12.—With thousands of women spending hundreds of thousands of dollars this week for their Easter bonnets, Mrs. Hetty Green came forth to-day as the champion of the plain old fashioned hat, minus trimming, with no kick-up at front, rear or side.

Mrs. Green, perhaps the richest woman in the world, is not going to go to service Easter Sunday in the modern type of headgear. She will not even have a new hat, but just the same dumpy little thing that tucks sensibly over her head and would require a tornado to tear loose.

"There are too many fripperies about these hats for the young women who will get them," she declared, when she viewed the 100 Easter bonnets made by wealthy society women in a prize competition. The hats will go to 100 girls of the East Side free.

"Those hats are entirely too gay," she said. "They will keep the girls out on the street. What the girls need is a plain, old-fashioned small bonnet, almost a Quaker bonnet."

The wealthy old woman made that statement to C. H. DeLyon Nicholls, who presented the $5,000 worth of prizes to the fashionable amateur milliners who won them. He is the Governor-General of the National Society of Colonial Cavaliers.

"Mrs. Green is philanthropic," he said, "but she did not approve of the beautiful hats."

SWEEPING MILK PROBE STARTED

Attorney-General Wickersham personally ordered the Federal investigation of the milk situation in Boston and New England, which has been begun before the United States Grand Jury now in session. His orders were to make the inquiry as thorough as possible. He is represented in the investigation by Special Assistant United States Attorney-General George S. Gregg, who is in Boston to direct the introducing of evidence before the Grand Jury.

Mr. Gregg said:

"It is true that we are to make a thorough investigation of the milk situation, not only in Boston, but in all New England. It will probably take some time. When such investigations begin one thing often leads to another and therefore new witnesses have to be called and the investigation is lengthened.

"I cannot say how many witnesses have so far been summoned. We have begun the investigation and will carry it on to a completion. Some testimony has already been heard. I can only say the inquiry will be thorough."

"What is the reason for the present investigation?" Mr. Gregg was asked.

"It was directed," he replied, "by Attorney-General Wickersham.

"On whose complaint?"

"That I do not care to say."

"Is the investigation begun for the purpose of inquiring into the matter of the railroad rates?"

"I cannot go more into details as to the scope of the inquiry. There are many things that will be considered."

The Grand Jury investigation, Mr. Gregg said, was brought to inquire into alleged violations of the Sherman antitrust law. Beyond that he did not care to discuss particular features of the inquiry.

Among the witnesses summoned before the Grand Jury is Charles S. Sage of New Braintree, well known as a milk producer in central Massachusetts, doing business with the milk contractors in Boston.

The identity of other witnesses has not been made known. When Mr. Gregg was asked if any of the milk contractors in Boston had been summoned he declined to answer.

W. A. Graustein of Charlestown said he had not been summoned and declared he did not know of anyone who had been.

"However," he said, "I should like to see a full investigation into the whole subject, especially regarding the bottle law, which is unjust."

QUINCY WOMAN BADLY BURNED

Mrs. Laura Jones, aged seventy-six, widow of John Jones of No. 28 Pleasant street, South Quincy, was badly burned at her home to-day by a bonfire in which she was burning rubbish. William Taylor, a teamster, grabbed a blanket and went to the rescue of the woman. She was removed to the city hospital, where she is not expected to survive her injuries. Taylor was badly burned about the hands.

BAKER MAKES PLEA FOR BOYS

Judge Harvey H. Baker of the Boston Juvenile Court, speaking to-day at the meeting of the Chamber of Commerce Assembly at the American House, asked Boston business men to give boys on probation from the courts or just out of reform schools employment and a chance of becoming good, self-supporting citizens.

"It takes public spirit to employ such boys," said Judge Baker, "because there are plenty of lads with clean records, good presence and regular habits, who will give satisfactory service from the start, while many of these probationers are likely at first to be so troublesome that an employer regarding them from an ordinary business standpoint would hesitate to take them. But the employment of court boys is not without justification even as a matter of business when 'business' is considered in a broad way.

"These young fellows must have food and clothing. If they are kept in institutions, they must be supported by taxation; they cannot produce anything of value there, and therefore, while confined, they are absolutely dead weight for the taxpayers to carry. No one would stand for supporting these lads indefinitely in that way. It is, therefore, obvious that in the end they must have some private employment, or else support themselves by begging or stealing. If given employment many of them will after a time become genuinely self-supporting and thus it is truly, in a broad sense, good 'business' to employ them."

JUDGE CONDEMNS CHELSEA CROSSING

The grade crossing at Everett avenue, Chelsea, is condemned by Judge Albert D. Bosson of the Chelsea District Court in his report of an inquest into the death of William E. McQuown, killed there December 2. The report says: "It is clear that the accident would not have occurred had the grade of the street and of the railroad been separated, and the justice urges that steps be taken to abolish the grade crossing."

By the Way, Patrolman Anonymous the Address Is No. 80 Summer St.

I'll give $5. to charity if you print this ans.

[CONFIDENTIAL]

To the Editor of the Boston Sunday AMERICAN

My choice for Police Commissioner of Boston

Stephen O'Meara

I think he is the best man for the place because he is honest, just. does not let Politicians run the police dept. Is capatable and tells the truth which is more than the American does.

[NO SIGNATURE NECESSARY]

One of the Boston patrolmen who responded to the invitation of the Boston AMERICAN to express his choice for Police Commissioner, stating the reason for his choice, said, in answer, that he would "give $5 to charity if the AMERICAN printed his answer."

This man's answer was printed in the Sunday AMERICAN, together with a demand for the five dollars and a public pledge to see that it went to deserving charity, and was promptly acknowledged.

The AMERICAN is still waiting for the five.

The letter of inquiry sent out by the Boston AMERICAN read as follows:

CONFIDENTIAL.

Boston, April 6, 1911.

Dear Sir—Who is the man in Boston best fitted for Police Commissioner? Should O'Meara succeed himself or should another man be selected? Why?

The replies to these questions will be printed in next Sunday's AMERICAN for the purpose of helping Governor Foss to make up his mind as to what is best to do when O'Meara's term expires on June 5. The Governor has no applications for the position.

The policemen of Boston know the police business and are better qualified to pass on this question than any other men in the city. Will you please indicate your opinion on the accompanying postal card and drop it in a mail box before midnight Friday night.

The AMERICAN assures you that your identity will not be disclosed in any way and that it will be absolutely a secret ballot. This card is being sent to every member of the police force of Boston and it is hoped that every one will reply.

BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN,
80-82 Summer street, Boston, Mass.

Hundreds of postal cards were received in answer to this inquiry. Most of them were well written. A refreshingly large number of policemen expressed original views. Most of them favored the present Commissioner, who has written his valedictory and will not be reappointed. Many favored Captain Frederick George Hoffman, retired.

Only one reply in the lot was meant to be offensive. One Boston policeman wrote this:

"To the Editor of the Boston Sunday AMERICAN:

"My choice for Police Commissioner of Boston is Stephen O'Meara. I think he is the best man for the place because he is honest, just, does not let politicians run the police department, is capable and tells the truth, which is more than the AMERICAN does.

"I'll give $5 to charity if you print this answer."

The AMERICAN did not print all the answers. To have done that would have taken more space than this newspaper could well give to one matter. Many excellent opinions had to be thrown aside. Printing the insulting postal card herein referred to, however, apparently meant five dollars for charity. So it was printed. On our part, we stipulated that the writer should send the money to this office, and we promised to give it to a deserving charity and print the acknowledgement.

It may be that, having returned the postal, the policeman doesn't know the address. We desire to say to him that we are holding forth at No. 80 Summer street, and in all kindness we urge, beg and invite him to "come across" at once.

SUES FOR $95,000 AND GETS 6 CENTS

NEW YORK, April 12.—Six cents damages was awarded to William Casey by a Brooklyn jury for the injury to his reputation sustained when he was arrested and photographed by Brooklyn detectives, charged with a crime of which he was acquitted on trial.

COTTON MEN OPEN SESSION

Annual meeting No. 90 of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers opened in Huntington Hall, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, at 11 o'clock to-day. Several hundred members were present. The meeting will end to-morrow afternoon.

An honorary medal of the society was granted to Charles T. Main of Boston for his work and paper entitled "Choice of Power for Textile Mills." Mr. Main has been a constant contributor to the proceedings of the society.

Governor Foss was unable to give the welcoming address, and so President Richard C. Maclaurin of Technology, welcomed the visitors.

The report of Secretary C. J. H. Woodbury, the address of President Franklin W. Hobbs of Brookline, and the award of the association medal were the features of the morning session. In his report Secretary Woodbury referred to the recent passage of the forest conservation bill. He said:

"The last year has been a most active one in the history of the association, both in regard to its efforts and its accomplishments, the event of the most material value to the cotton manufacturing interests having been that of the passage of the Forest Conservation bill, and although the measure was not as complete as the original form, yet it will eventually be of the greatest value to all users of water power in protecting the headwaters of the Appalachian or White Mountains, of navigable streams flowing into the Atlantic Ocean."

President Hobbs, in his address, regretted the poor year that the cotton manufacturers had been compelled to undergo. He offered the consolation that conditions at present were worse in England. He warned the growers in this country against the activity of foreign countries in improving the growth of cotton abroad. He asked everyone to remember that every bale of foreign cotton, while it might be of inferior quality, nevertheless displaced a bale of American cotton. He declared that the United States now furnished 70 per cent. of the world's supply of cotton. He then said:

"I think I am not too optimistic to believe that from the present acreage the production could be doubled if proper methods were used and it is along such lines that our friends in the South must work to secure the best results for themselves and the spinners."

KIDNAPED BOY'S UNCLES IN JAIL

LAS VEGAS, N. M., April 11.—With Will and John Rogers, uncles of little Waldo Rogers, in jail here, and the $12,000 ransom money recovered, the mystery of the kidnaping of the two-year-old boy was solved to-day.

Will Rogers confessed that he was guilty of the kidnaping, which took place more than a month ago, and that his brother had helped him. The men were arrested last night on the confession of Joe Wiggins, former convict.

Wiggins told how he and Will Rogers, who is a stenographer, had planned the kidnaping and how Wiggins's wife had prepared a small house just outside Las Vegas for the occupancy of the boy. He said $16 worth of groceries had been stored in the house, and that after his ransom had been paid Wiggins and his wife had gone there to live.

Detectives showed a photograph of Wiggins to the little boy, and he appeared to recognize it. The men probably will have a hearing to-morrow.

DEFEND CAPTAIN OF LIFE-SAVERS

Investigation of the charges of inefficiency, misconduct and neglect of duty, made against the keeper of the City Point life-saving station, is under way at a hearing before First Lieutenant Charles Satterlee of the revenue cutter service and assistant inspector for the first and second districts of the United States life-saving service, in room 201, Equitable building. Wilbert Soule, ex-commodore, and John J. Tobin, vice-commodore of the South Boston Yacht Club, testified that they had had unusual opportunities to observe the management of the station, and that they had never seen any misconduct, inefficiency or neglect of duty.

Captain Franklin E. Hamilton, in command of the station, attended the meeting.

The charges were made by ex-Congressman O'Connell in the House of Representatives February 24 last, during a debate on an amendment to the sundry civil appropriation bill. The amendment was to the effect that part of the money appropriated for maintenance of the life-saving service should be paid to Captain Hamilton of the City Point station.

Witnesses are expected to appear to-day to substantiate the charges.

GARAGE BURNS, GASOLENE SAFE

While a two-story garage of the Brockway-Smith Corporation in Medford street, Charlestown, burned to-day, twenty-five gallons of gasolene in a $5,000 auto truck which started the blaze, failed to explode.

Another remarkable feature of the fire, which caused a loss of only $1,000, was that three other auto trucks, all worth thousands of dollars, were saved with slight injury, while the building was ruined.

The blaze started from the back-firing of the auto engine. Immediately the load of blinds, sashes and doors which are manufactured by the company and which was to have been taken out for shipment, caught fire, and the whole wooden structure was on fire, with hay in the second story. The firemen preveteud the flames from communicating to the large factory adjoining, and none can explain why the gasoline did not explode. The firm has its Boston office on Sudbury street.

MISS DE BEAU, WHO HELPED TO GIVE 3,000 ORPHANS GOOD TIME

LUDOVICA DE BEAU

INJURED, PLEADS DON'T TELL WIFE

Harold B. Duncan, thirty-five, is at the East Boston Relief Hospital suffering from two badly crushed feet, while his wife, who recently became a mother, is ill at their home, No. 5 Church street, ignorant of his injuries.

Duncan was caught between the bumpers of two freight cars on the Clyde pier off Marginal street, East Boston, early to-day, and while being taken to the East Boston Relief hospital pleaded with the police not to tell his wife. He feared that the news of his injuries would be too much for her.

Duncan is employed at the pier as a watchman, and was making his rounds when the accident happened. A freight train blocked the way from one side of the pier to the other. Duncan started to cross between two of the cars. His foot slipped on the bumpers and before he could regain his equilibrium the cars came together and both feet were caught. Several of the train crew rushed to his assistance. An ambulance was summoned and he was hurried to the hospital.

Despite the intense pain, Duncan's only thoughts were of his sick wife at home. He gave his name and address to the police, but begged them not to let the wife know.

3,000 MADE GLAD AT WILD WEST

More than 3,000 orphan, crippled and poor children from the slums and tenements saw the 101 Ranch Wild West Show yesterday afternoon as guests of the Boston AMERICAN.

The little ones with their teachers or guardians occupied two-thirds of the seating space of the great Boston Arena, and they were the most appreciative and satisfying audience that the cowboys and cow girls and Indians of the organization ever played to.

Their laughter was free and spontaneous. It burst forth in shrieks. Everything amused them, even the shooting and killing of Indians and white men, for they were too young to know the meaning of death.

One little girl was taken from the Arena in hysterics. Her teacher explained that the child had never in her eight years seen any sort of an entertainment and she had laughed so heartily she could not stop.

The AMERICAN provided a bag of peanuts for each child and hundreds of the youngsters had never before tasted a peanut.

Circus people are not sentimental. They are inclined to be cynical and hard-hearted. But there filed into the Arena shortly before the performance began a long procession, so pitiful that the canvas men, the ushers, the cowboys and the office staff could not look at it unmoved.

It was the contingent from the St. Botolph Street Home for Crippled Children, and there were 150 of them. Most of the tots were on crutches, but some limped along on iron shoes, others were hunched backed and more lacked an arm or leg.

They were so small, and so unfortunate, and so unconscious of their wretchedness that it brought tears to the eyes of many who saw them enter. The little cripples were as much excited and as much delighted with what they saw as the orphans around them who were not maimed.

Laugh at Everything.

The presence of the multitude of orphans and poor children had a stimulating effect upon the performance. The clowns never worked so hard in their lives and were never more completely successful. Every trick and movement provoked shrill laughter. The children could not sit still, but climbed upon their seats in their excitement.

Nothing alarmed or terrified the kids. They yelled with glee when the guns and pistols were fired because it was like the Fourth of July. They were hard-hearted in their innocence, for they laughed most loudly when a cowboy or Indian or Cossack was hurled from his horse. The terrible scene where a horse thief is roped by avenging cowboys, dragged from his saddle upon his face by a galloping horse the length of the Arena, while pursuing cowboys riddle him with bullets, caused many of the good instructors in the various Aysiums to shriek with horror and indignation, but the youngsters thought it was funny.

The kids began to come as early as 1:30. The first to arrive were fifty children from the Leopold Morse home in Mattapan, in charge of Superintendent Wolf. From that time until 2.15 the stream never stopped. About the same time there were arriving autos loaned by the White Company, and in which came the pretty show girls who were to assist in the care of the children. As soon as all the children had been seated, Miss Ludovica DeBeau of the "Jumping Jupiter" company gave the word to her assistants to distribute the peanuts provided by the Boston AMERICAN.

3,000 Bags of Peanuts.

With the aid of her volunteer assistants, including "Dutch" Cohen of the Show, Miss DeBeau passed out three thousand bags of peanuts.

"I never had so much fun in my life," declared Miss DeBeau after the distribution was completed. I never knew that a few little peanuts would make children so happy."

The finale of the 101 Ranch is extremly picturesque. A band of pioneers including several women and a great canvas-opped wagon drive into the Arena and make camp. A roaring campfire is soon burning and the settlers make themselves comfortable. Suddenly a band of Indians on horseback surround the camp. They circle about and shoot down the whites who defend themselves to the last. The canvas wagon catches on fire and lights up with a horrid glare, and the Indians split the air with their warhoops. The jubilation of the redskins turns to fear when they are attacked in their turn by a troup of United States soldiers, who drive them away, while the band plays the "Star Spangled Banner."

The yelling of the children was continuous during this scene, and when all was over they could hardly be dragged from the Arena. They departed looking backward.

The various institutions through their superintendants, were profuse in their expressions of gratitude to the Boston AMERICAN for the best outing the children had ever enjoyed.

Coal in Winter—Gas in Summer

Crawford Ranges

Combination Coal and Gas

In summer, when you want a cool kitchen, Gas is the fuel to use most of the time. The Crawford Combination Coal and Gas range is the ideal range.

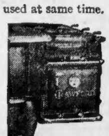

The Crawford gas ovens are safe against explosions. The burners are lighted in a new way; there is no dangerous pilot light. This feature is patented.

There is an extra set of burners at the top for broiling; a great advantage over the ordinary gas oven.

Gas Oven and Coal Range can be used at same time.

Double Oven above or Single Oven at the end.

The Crawford Coal range with its Single Damper (patented), its wonderful Oven, its Ash Hod in the base with Coal Hod beside it, is a joy to cook.

WOMEN CONDEMN ORGY OF GIRLS AND NEW HAMPSHIRE SENATORS

PROGRESSIVE CITIZENS OF STATE ORGANIZE TO FIGHT CORRUPT LAWMAKERS.

Representative citizens from every section of New Hampshire are to-day perfecting State-wide organization of clean-minded and clean-living voters for the purpose of putting an end to the treachery and betrayal of the public trust by the State's "Special Interest" Senate. The new league, which promises to be a power for great good in bringing about a house-cleaning in the State House at Concord, stands for reform in three important particulars:

First, to destroy forever the octopus-like grip the Boston & Maine and other corporate interests have had on the New Hampshire Legislature for years.

Second, to "discipline," if necessary, the recreant sixteen Senators who have persistently blocked all popular legislation, and to render impossible the holdings in the future of orgies by public officials like the disgraceful dancing-girl dinner at the Rockingham House in Portsmouth.

Third, to awaken the public conscience to the urgent necessity of electing only men who will truly represent the people at Concord and to unite the people of the State in an organization which can voice the popular demand for the support of the reform measures advocated by Governor Bass.

Will Be Non-Partisan.

The organization is one of the most far-reaching ever attempted in New Hampshire. It is non-partisan in character. It will be aimed to hold both Republicans and Democrats in the Senate and House at Concord to strict account for violations of their pledges to the people. It is probably the most important reform organization ever started in New Hampshire.

In the list of members of the new association are some of the best known of New Hampshire's sons. One of the leading figures in the movement is Winston Churchill, the famous novelist, whose home is at Cornish. Mr. Churchill has long been one of the State's stringest champions to oust the Boston & Maine octopus from the State House and to institute radical reforms. With him are associated in the organization such men as Robert E. Faulkner, prominent manufacturer of Keene; Attorney Robert L. Manning of Manchester, Attorney Sherman E. Burroughs of Manchester, Dr. John M. Gile of Hanover, a member of the Governor's Council; Attorney Louis Wyman of Manchester, Senator Winsor H. Goodnow of Keene, former Mayor Eugene Reed of Manchester, Representative Raymond B. Stevens of Landaff, Representative George F. Farrand of Concord, Attorney Robert Jackson of Concord, Herbert E. Dunnington, merchant, of Manchester; Attorney Edward C. Niles of Concord, Dr. J. Weaver and Judge James W. Remick of Concord, and two score others.

> Resolved, That as a Christian organization standing for purity in all departments of life we deprecate the action of some of our State Senators at a recent banquet at Portsmouth as reported in the daily press, and we emphatically protest against the election of men of such character to fill the highest offices in our Legislature, whose members should stand for honor, integrity and purity.—Resolution adopted by Concord Women's Christian Temperance Union on midnight girlie revel of State Senators.

One of the members is Senator James Gerry, of Madison, a progressive. Senator Gerry has but one blot upon his career, his friends claim. That was his attendance at the now-popular girlie-bridal-suite dinner at Portsmouth. Those to whom he had confided his real opinions declared to-day that he was "guiltless, because guileless," as he was roped in by some senatorial friends, when in truth he was unwise to the ways of the world and never suspected the kind of show that was to be pulled off at the Rockingham House in Portsmouth.

Those who have banded together in the organization have decided to make a stiff fight against the vested interests, the Boston & Maine and senatorial treachery. They are determined that the influence of their league will reach into the most remote districts of New Hampshire. The name proposed for the organization is the "State Citizens' Association."

The association is the direct result of conditions in the New Hampshire Senate, which were exposed in the Sunday AMERICAN. Readers of the AMERICAN were told last Sunday of the effectual blocking of popular legislation by sixteen Senators, eleven Republicans and five Democrats, and how these men had betrayed the trust their constituents had imposed in them. It was this expose in the AMERICAN that caused Norman Hapgood, editor of Collier's, to declare in a speech at Ford Hall that the Boston AMERICAN was the only paper that was courageous enough to tell New Hampshire voters the truth about their Senate.

Aroused by the American.

The AMERICAN'S story aroused people throughout New Hampshire. It set them to thinking. One result of this is seen in the numbers of citizens who are ready and willing to join the State Citizens' Association in its crusade against vice and corruption.

Members of the association told to-day of the widespread influence of special interests in New Hampshire politics. Attorney Edward C. Niles of Concord declared that the corporate influence had made it impossible for the people to learn the facts by reading the daily newspapers. He said that while the Boston & Maine and lesser interests get into print both in New Hampshire and in Boston, the motives of the real leaders for good principles have been twisted and their efforts throttled in the public press.

"The people of this State," declared Attorney Niles, "are signally pleased at the attitude of the Boston AMERICAN."

The association just formed plans to tell the people of New Hampshire the truth about the men who are elected to office.

The members are keeping a watchful eye over the State Senate, to see whether the Senators who have been branded as traitors to the people will stick to their promise to turn over a new leaf. Most of the recreant Senators have declared they will support the Bass measures which will be brought into the Senate this week. The members say they are willing to allow the Senators to redeem themselves, but will see to it that they toe the mark.

Changes in the attitude of these Senators were noticeable to-day. Either because of the organization of the association, or because of the expose in the AMERICAN, and probably because of both, the sixteen who have been stumbling-blocks in the way of progressive legislation have run to cover or are throwing their verbal influence to Governor Bass. The people of New Hampshire are thankful that there is some prospect of seeing several big measures made laws.

"Show Up the Traitors."

The Citizens' Association was formed at a secret meeting of fifty men at the offices of Niles & Upton, within the shadow of the State House at Concord. "The recalcitrant Senators must carry out their pledges or be shown up," was the keynote of the gathering. State and executive committees were appointed. The chairman of the organization committee is Robert E. Faulkner of Keene.

Discussing the association, Attorney Robert Jackson said to-day, at Concord: "I believe that while men may differ on the merits of a public question and have a right to vote as they please, provided they have not pledged themselves, they can have no excuse for voting against measures which they have promised to support. If these Senators had stated publicly before election they were opposed to the party platform, they certainly would have a right to vote as they please, but not otherwise. That is how the thinking people of New Hampshire feel on this matter."

Attorney Edward C. Niles of Concord was enthusiastic over the future of the organization. He went into a discussion of some of its aims.

"People Are Aroused."

"This organization is the spontaneous expression of the State-wide dissatisfaction over the Senators who have thwarted the will of the people. The biggest men in this State are in the movement. The State is determined; the people are thoroughly aroused. One thing is very certain, the people are not going to brook corporate interference. No special interests will be allowed to stand in the way of reform. Corporate influence is going to be a thing of the past, if this movement wins out. And the victory I feel sure will be for the people.

"Nor will the people longer stand for Senators who ignore their pledges, who, as the roll calls in the Senate will show, have turned on the voters who elected them. The word comes to us now that these Senators will support Governor Bass on the big questions to come up this week. Let us wait and see. The people are dissatisfied with their work in the past. They must make good.

"We have had civic leagues of a local nature in the past in the State. They have grown and united into larger organizations. Their usefulness has been great. This is to be a State wide league. One reason that justifies it at this time, in addition to the conditions in our Senate, is that, through the working of the special interests, as we are forced to believe, the State has too frequently been misrepresented, even in the daily newspapers. It is often impossible to get at the facts. People who depend on some papers don't get the facts.

American Praised by Citizens.

"We want the people to know what their public servants are doing. The Boston & Maine and lesser interests got into print both in New Hampshire and in Boston. But the real leaders for good principles found their motives twisted and their efforts throttled in the public press.

"I want to say, too, that the people of this State are signally pleased at the attitude of the Boston AMERICAN, in telling the facts about conditions in the Senate and in supporting the reform measures we incorporated in our platforms."

News that the Citizens' League has been organized to show up the traitors in the Senate, set some of the Senators to talking. It was generally agreed that the new association will do a world of good in New Hampshire politics.

One of the "sixteen Senators," who has all along opposed platform measures, made this defence when the question of violation of pledge was put up to him:

"Men vote on their judgment. People say we were all pledged. That is not quite true of the Republican convention. We wanted the platform printed. It was not done. It was simply read and subscribed to. Few could remember all it contained. I might be in favor of a certain measure in the abstract form. But it might come later before the Senate in a form that I could not accept. I would not vote for such a measure. This is the explanation of why I voted against the platform measure that I have opposed. This is the answer to this talk of blocking reform legislation."

At a largely attended meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union in Concord, members discussed at length the revelations made by the AMERICAN of conditions in the New Hampshire Senate. The "thirteen" who attended the Portsmouth dinner were roundly condemned by those who addressed the meeting. The Union adopted the following resolutions:

"Resolved, That as a Christian organization, standing for purity in all departments of life, we deprecate the action of some of our State Senators at a recent banquet in Portsmouth, as reported in the daily press and we emphatically protest against the election of men of such character to fill the highest offices in our Legislature whose members should stand for honor, integrity and purity."

More than a score of Portsmouth citizens who are in Concord to urge the establishment of a State Armory in their city, expressed great indignation to-day over the disgrace brought upon Portsmouth by the dinner at the Rockingham House. They declare that the city should take steps to prevent a repetition of the midnight revels, as they would in the end give the city an unsavory reputation.

Advice About the Skin

In the treatment and cure of eczema and other skin diseases, two conditions are necessary. One is to exclude dust, germs and air from the diseased parts, and the other is to set up the healing process at the same time. The new medical compound, Cadum, accomplishes both these results so effectively that the itching is stopped soon after it is applied, and the sore parts heal up quickly. Cadum is just as effective in the cure of pimples, blotches, acne, herpes, eruptions, chafings, psoriasis, sores, etc. 10c and 25c per box. At all druggists.

The Family Upstairs—Dingbat Thought He Had Him, But It Was a Mistake

By Herriman

COULD NOT PUT HANDS IN WATER

Because of Severe and Stubborn Eczema. Used Everything for Nearly Eight Years. Could not Sleep. After Few Applications of Cuticura Ointment, Burning and Itching Lessened. Could Sleep Well.

Now Has Hands as Clear as Anyone.

"Some nine years ago I noticed small pimples breaking out on the back of my hands. They became very irritating, and gradually became worse, so that I could not sleep at night. I consulted a physician who treated me a long time, but it got worse, and I could not put my hands in water. I was treated at the hospital, and it was just the same. I was told that it was a very bad case of eczema. Well, I just kept on using everything that I could for nearly eight years until I was advised to try Cuticura Ointment. I did so, and I found after a few applications and by bandaging my hands well up that the burning sensations were disappearing, I could sleep well, and did not have any itching during the night. I began after a while to use Cuticura Soap for a wash for them, and I think by using the Soap and Ointment I was much benefited. I stuck to the Cuticura treatment, and thought if I could use other remedies for over seven years with no result, and after only having a few applications and finding ease from Cuticura Ointment, I thought it deserved a fair trial with a severe and stubborn case. I used the Ointment and Soap for nearly six months, and I am glad to say that I have hands as clear as anyone.

"It is my wish that you publish this letter to all the world, and if anyone doubts it, let them write me and I will give them the name of my physician, also the hospital I was treated at." (Signed) Miss Mary A. Bentley, 98 University St., Montreal, Que., Sept. 14, '10.

LARGE SALE IN THE BACK BAY

Henry W. Savage reports that he has sold No. 360 Commonwealth avenue, near the corner of Massachusetts avenue. The property consists of a 4-story brick dwelling house carrying a total assessment of $26,500, of which amount $17,000 is on the 2,614 square feet of land. W. Stanley Tripp conveyed to J. H. Morse.

Mary Kiernan has sold to Harry C. Garland the four-story and basement brick house and 950 square feet of land at No. 28 Billerica street, near Causeway street, West End, all taxed for $7,900, of which $2,600 is on the land.

Robert H. Connor has sold to Catherina Riddle the two frame houses, stable and 38,833 square feet of land at Nos. 130-132 East Cottage street, near Massachusetts avenue, Dorchester, adjoining the city nurseries, all assessed for $14,500, of which $6,000 is on the land.

Catherine J. Hart has purchased from Anna L. Weis a lot of land at the corner of Roseclair and Greenhalge streets, Dorchester, containing 8,483 square feet and taxed for $3,400; and from James A. Boyd et al, a lot of land on Greenhalge street, near Roseclair street, containing 1,915 square feet, assessed for $800.

Patrick F. O'Keefe has sold to John R. McDonald the frame house, stable and 4,031 square feet of land at No. 72 Edson street, near Milton avenue, Dorchester. This property is taxed for a total of $3,800.

In Roxbury the brick house and 1,853 square feet of land at No. 24 Winthrop street, near Kearsage avenue, all taxed for $7,400, of which $1,400 is on the land, have been sold by Horace E. Cummings to Elizabeth E. Elliott.

Mabel E. Reed has sold to Simon Cabelinsky the frame house and 5,860 square feet of land at Nos. 44-46 Intervale street, between Blue Hill avenue and Normandy street, Roxbury, all taxed for $7,100, of which $2,100 is on the land.

In South Boston the frame house and 2,875 square feet of land at No. 118 West Seventh street, near D street, all taxed for $5,300, have been purchased by Mary Harrington from the Abbie A. Lawless estate.

Emma S. Dyer has sold to Addie S. Frost the three-story brick house and 1,000 square feet of land at No. 132 M street, near East Sixth street, South Boston, all assessed for $2,500.

SAVE THIS PRESCRIPTION

The following prescription may prove more valuable than gold in time of need. For weak, deranged kidneys, bladder or other urinary organs, mix one-half ounce fluid extract buchu, one-half ounce murax compound, six ounces good pure gin. Take one to two teaspoonfuls after each meal and at bed time. Any well stocked drug store has the ingredients. It is easily mixed. This quickly restores these organs to their natural power of carrying off impurities. Backache, rheumatic pains and other well known symptoms must be treated promptly to be safe from more serious kidney trouble.

CHURCHES' PLEA FOR BOTTLE LAW

The Federation of Churches and Religious Organizations of Greater Boston has sent to the Boston Licensing Board a lengthy letter urging the board to strictly enforce the bar and bottle law, and interpreting the law in a manner flatly contradictory to the opinion recently rendered by Richard Olney.

The letter was sent to the board yesterday. It was signed by for the Board of Directors of the Federation by George L. Paine, president, and Christopher R. Eliot, secretary. The Federation declares in the letter that first and fourth class licenses should be separated in such a manner that a person passing from one to the other would be compelled to come out into the street in full view of the public.

The Licensing Board is urged to abolish the practice of "treating on the house," discourage the sale of bottle liquor in very small packages, abolish the sale of it in can or pitchers, to diminish the number of saloons in suburban districts and materially lessen the number of licensed hotels.

In regard to the separation of first and fourth class licenses the letter says:

"In our judgment the two branches of the liquor business represented by first and fourth class licenses should in all cases be at a remove from each other. We doubt very much whether it is in accordance with the spirit of the liquor law in general to place any two liquor licenses in adjoining premises; but if these licenses were of the two classes whose contiguity is indicated by the new law to be objectionable, we should feel strongly that the combined purport of the statutes was not being upheld. Should this be done at all, it should be confined to the business centres of the city, and great pains should be taken to see that there is no indirect, as well as no direct, means of communication between the two establishments.

"There should, of course, not be any cases where one entrance leads into two such licensed places, or even where the two entrances are together; but in all cases it should be necessary to pass out into the street, under full observation of the public, in order to go from the one to the other."

The circulation of the AMERICAN is 300,000 more than its next highest competitor and 100,000 more than all the other evening papers of Boston combined.

WOLCOTT DOG WINS HONORS

Prescott Wolcott, son of the late Governor Wolcott, won signal honors to-day at the New England Kennel Club's dog show at Mechanics Building with the Airedale terrier, Kenmore Soceress. This dog was made a champion.

The dog was surrounded by well known society people who heaped congratulations upon the owner after the tri-color had been pinned to the bench. The dog defeated Prince of York, a $3,000 dog, that has been the sensation of the country this season, for the best terrier in the show.

To-day found a large crowd on hand at the second day of the show, including such well-known society people as Mr. and Mrs. A. Robeson Sargent, Lieutenant-Commander and Mrs. J. L. Lattimer, U. S. N.; Dr. Henry Jarrett of Philadelphia, Mr. and Mrs. Ellen Blaine Stanwood, Mr. and Mrs. Tyler Morse, who have just returned from Europe; Mr. and Mrs. A. Henry Higginson, Jr., who are showing a number of foxhounds and West Highland terriers; T. W. Lawson and Miss Jean Chandler Lawson, James Lynde of Port Huron, Mich.; G. W. Keyes of New York, Andrew Albright of New York, W. C. Cadman of Providence and Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Lawson.

SPECIAL RITES IN CHURCHES

The office of the Tenebrae will be sung in most of the Catholic churches of the world to-night and repeated to-morrow and Friday night.

To-morrow, Maundy Thursday, there will be but one mass celebrated. On this day the institution of the Eucharist or Lord's supper, will be commemorated at this mass. At the close of the mass the altars are stripped and the candles are extinguished.

The Sacred Host to be consumed on Good Friday is deposited in the tabernacle of a side altar, which is profusely decorated with floral offerings and burning candles. In the evening the Tenebrae is again rendered.

At the Good Friday service the ceremony of the "Adoration of the Cross" is held, as it is at those in the evening.

On Saturday the ceremony will consist of the blessing of Easter holy water and of the paschal candle. The altars are again clothed in white linens and the ornaments are restored to represent the glories of the resurrection. From the musical service of this day the Credo, offertory, and the Agnus Dei are eliminated from the mass.

On Easter Sunday the church celebrates the feast of Hope. The altars bear ornaments of joyous colors, and the musical features are conducted on an extensive scale with largely augmented choirs.

The exercises at the Cathedral are likely to attract an enormous crowd each evening of the week except Saturday, when the Tenebrae will be given by the sanctuary choir with the lessons by the clergy. And on Easter Sunday there will be pontifical high mass with the archbishop officiating and a sermon by the Rev. Prior Higgins of London.

The Truth About Our Civil War

Not idealized in fanciful artist's handiwork but the real thing as shown in 3500 photographs taken under Secret Service protection, by permission of President Lincoln. Lost for fifty years and now found again.

You can see the men who fought our Civil War fifty years ago as closely as you see the boys in their practice manoeuvers on the Mexican border today.

Grant saw these pictures taken, William Pinkerton helped to take them. The United States Government paid $30,000 for part of them. You can have them all in ten big volumes for less than one cent a picture.

10 Big Volumes
3500 Newly Found Photographs of Our Civil War

AMAZING but true—Our Civil War was photographed. From Sumter to Appomattox, Mathew Brady, foremost camera artist of his time, risked his life again and again, accompanying the armies and navies—under protection of Allan Pinkerton, of the U. S. Secret Service, and with special permission from Lincoln.

The men in Blue or Gray serving the guns, tearing up railroads, laying pontoons; in the grim trenches, 'round the camp fire, on the way to the hospital; famous leaders and dusty, bloody soldiers, gallant fighters and ghastly dead passed before the eyes of Brady's cameras. Through his infinite pains in treating every negative by the "Scott-Archer" chemical processes just discovered, those thousands of eye witnesses of our terrible national tragedy have been preserved to this day. Chance buried these almost unbelievable photographs from view for half a century. Now their resurrection comes, by another strange chance, just in time for the country-wide celebration of the semi-centennial of 1861.

THE United States Government paid $27,840 for the Brady pictures; but the great camera genius who took the photographs kept a duplicate set for himself. When he died these too were lost; until now, nearly fifty years after the war, they have been found again. How they were taken, how they were lost, how they were recovered—how the Review of Reviews secured them and put them into a superb set of books so that you and every other American would own them is a wonderful romance that can't be told here. Send the coupon and you will get the whole story.

It is most fitting that President Taft has been pleased to write a special letter for inclusion in the history that accompanies these photographs, for the work is no more dramatic in its illustrations than it is truly national in its text.

BEST HORSES IN FOUR-MILE RACE

LEXINGTON, Ky., April 12.—Announcement was made here of plans for one of the greatest racing events ever known in Kentucky. It will be a four-mile dash for running horses over the Kentucky course that bids the most money for it. Major F. A. Daingerfield, manager of James R. Keene's Castleton stud here, is in charge of the race, and will issue entry blanks.

ADAMS SQUARE

BIG REGATTA ON CHARLES RIVER

Although the rowing championships of the N. A. A. O. have been awarded to Saratoga, N. Y., despite the strong bid the New England Amateur Rowing Association made for the eight, oarsmen in New England have a big boating to look forward to, according to the present plans of members of the N. E. A. R. A.

It has been proposed by the leading authorities of that body that a monster rowing regatta be held on the Charles River Basin, the dates probably to be August 11 and 12, and if enough interest is manifested, perhaps canoe paddling, sailing races, motor boat races and other water sports will be added to the program, which would make it necessary for the regatta to be extended several days.

The members of the Union Boat Club are behind the movement and when official action is taken by that club, strong support is assured from other clubs in New England which feel keenly the loss of the national rowing championships here this year.

The promoters have received assurances that the best scullers from Canada, as well as many of the Western States, will enter. Jack O'Neil of Halifax, ex-champion, Butler, the Canadian champion, who will enter the diamond sculls at Henley; Shepherd of Hadlem and Gordon of the Philadelphia Vespers have all consented to compete if the plan materializes. It is also planned to get the Ottawa eight here, champions of this country and Canada, and also the Argonauts of Toronto, Detroits and the leading eights from New York and Philadelphia. In the four-oared race, crews from New York, Baltimore, Detroit and Halifax will probably enter.

RED SOX IN FOURTH PLACE, SAYS JONES

PORTLAND, Or., April 12.—Fielder Jones, former manager of the Chicago White Sox, and now a resident of this city, asked to-day to express his opinion on the American League race and the chances of his former teammates, said:

"I think Comiskey's club will be lucky to beat St. Louis out of the cellar position. Philadelphia will repeat in a walk, with Detroit as a possible contender for a portion of the season. The Athletics are just as strong as last year and should win again as handily. New York looks to be good for third place, while Cleveland and Boston will fight it out for fourth and fifth places.

"Washington, with Walter Johnson, ought to get sixth position, while the White Sox I place at seventh unless St. Louis shows a greater improvement than I believe possible, as Comiskey is shy on pitchers, and the American League race will be a pitchers' battle again this season.

"In the National League Chicago and New York will fight it out, with Cincinnati as a possible contender if Griffith's boozefighters behave."

The Game Is On at Last

HARLEY WON'T BE PLAYER-MANAGER

HAVERHILL, April 12.—Contrary to general expectations, Richard J. Harley, the old National Leaguer who had signed a contract to manage Haverhill, will not be with the club this season. He has found it impossible to get into shape and wishes to devote his time to business. He offered, however, to come to Haverhill and, sitting on the bench, direct the team for a reduced figure. A new move has been decided upon by the directors, however, and that is that President Daniel F. Cloheey will look after the financial end of the team and Harry H. Aubrey, the shortstop, secured from the Syracuse Club of the New York State League, will be the field captain.

HARVARD CLASS GAMES.

For the Harvard Interclass track games, which will be held on Soldiers' Field to-morrow afternoon, 269 entries have been received, which is one of the largest lists for several seasons and shows how the athletic game is booming at the Cambridge institution.

MANY ENTRIES IN FOR ACME A. A. RUN

Entries for the coming annual cross-country run of the Acme A. A. of Jamaica Plain, April 19, are coming in in such numbers that the club officials are certain that this annual event will be far ahead of those of former years both for quantity and quality of competitors. Last year's entry list has already been surpassed, the prominent entries including Cook, Robertson of the Brookline Gym and McCormack, winner of the Armory A. A. run.

Invitations have been extended to Winn Bailey and Tom Collins of the Irish-American A. C. of New York, both claimants to the title of amateur ten-mile cross-country champion, and there is a strong possibility that the two will make the trip to Boston, as there is nothing of a similar nature going on in New York to interfere. The run will be over the same course as in former years.

DR. ROLLER OUT TO BOX MORRIS

BUFFALO, April 12.—Dr. Ben F. Roller, the Seattle heavyweight wrestler, is the latest member of the "white hope" contingent, according to his own announcement made at the Lafayette Hotel.

Roller declared himself emphatically as a candidate for pugilistic laurels in the immediate future and followed up his declaration by sitting down and writing a formal challenge to Carl Morris, the big Oklahoma scrapper, who wiped up Mike Schreck the other day and who aspires to the crown now decorating the forehead of one J. Johnson, erstwhile demon of the automobiles, at present languishing in the San Francisco jail.

"I pick Morris for a challenge," said Roller, "because it looks very much as if he is the best of the white heavyweights now before the public who have not already been defeated by Johnson. I know Morris by sight and by reputation.

"When we were touring the country with the Jeffries combination we dropped off in Oklahoma, and Morris was one of the visitors to the camp. He was then a railroad engineer and declared his intention of taking up boxing."

EDDIE COLLINS CAN'T USE HIS AUTO

PHILADELPHIA, April 12.—More than 1,000 admirers of Eddie Collins, hero of the world's series, have contributed to purchase an automobile for Eddie Collins, the great batsman of the Athletics. After the presentation Connie Mack took occasion to call Eddie's attention to the fact that he had placed a ban on all "joy rides" for the Athletic players, and advised Collins to eliminate automobiling until after the baseball season.

The contribution to purchase an automobile was started when automobiles were presented to Ty Cobb and Larry Lajoie.

HENRI WANTS SAME NUMBER

Indications point to the entry list of the Boston Athletic Association American Marathon run, to be held one week from to-day, being as large as ever. Last year 193 entries were made.

The most noted entry received yesterday was that of Henri Renaud of Nashua, who won the race in 1909. Renaud requested No. 102, because it was the figure he carried in his winning race. Two more Nova Scotians, Alfred Rodgers and George Mackins, representatives of the Chebucto Club of Halifax, are among the recent entries. Henry Rawlins of North Brookfield, Ernest Peabody of Lynn, who has figured in many Marathons; Edward Ford, Boston; Harry Jenson, Glencoe A. C. of New York; Joseph Christou, Lowell Bachelors' Club; A. Higgins, Yonkers Y. M. C. A.; Henry W. Fliege, Franklin A. C., Westchester, N. Y.; Hanohan, New York; Hugh Neil, Worcester A. A.; Gordon Wolfe, Boston, and William Simons, Roslindale, sent in their entries yesterday.

A VALUABLE SUGGESTION

Information of Importance to Everyone

A great deal of pain and suffering might be avoided if we had some knowledge of physiology and the care of the body, particularly those parts that do the most work and should always be kept strong and healthy.

In an interview with a prominent physician he states that people should pay more attention to their kidneys, as they control the other organs to a remarkable degree and do a tremendous amount of work in removing the poisons and waste matter from the system by filtering the blood.

During the Winter months especially, when we live an indoor life, the kidneys should receive some assistance when needed, as we take less exercise, drink less water and often eat more rich heavy food, thereby forcing the kidneys to do more work than nature intended. Evidence of kidney trouble, such as lame back, inability to hold urine, smarting or burning, brick-dust or sediment, sallow complexion, rheumatism, may be weak or irregular heart action, warns you that your kidneys require help immediately to avoid more serious trouble.

An herbal medicine containing no minerals or opiates has the most healing influence. An ideal herbal compound that has had remarkable success as a kidney remedy is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by mail, absolutely free. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and mention the Boston Daily American.

BASEBALL OPENING AT LAWRENCE PARK

LAWRENCE, April 12.—Mayor John T. Cahill, the Lawrence city government, and the presidents, managers and officials of the New England League Baseball clubs, officiated at the opening of Riverside Park, the new home of the Lawrence New England team, and incidentally saw the Brooklyn Nationals trim the locals, 9 to 0.

The game was the first played by the locals, and was featured by loose fielding and poor work in general, especially by the Lawrence team. Over 2,000 fans braved the biting winds to witness the opening game and the dedication.

The grounds are conceded to be the finest in the New England league circuit. To properly dedicate the park to-day, Mayor Cahill broke a bottle of champagne on the home plate, while the players of both teams, headed by a brass band, stood about and cheered.

A parade of both teams, headed by a brass band, preceded the christening of the grounds. Mayor Cahill made a brief address and pitched the first ball.

Elmer Koetzer, a former Lawrence pitcher, twirled against the home team, and pitched fine ball until relieved in the sixth inning. Rose, a Southpaw, started the game for Lawrence, and was relieved in the sixth inning by Welch, a Boston lad.

NO INTERCLUB HORSE RACES

The Interclub Association, formed by the five Gentlemen's Driving Clubs of Greater Boston a year ago, to hold a series of interclub matinees, will not conduct a similar series the coming season.

Representatives of the five clubs met at the Quincy House, and after considering the matter in its various aspects decided to abandon the series.

Instead, the clubs will go back to the old plan of racing among one another in local matinees whenever they feel so disposed.

Several reasons combined to prevent an Interclub Association series this year. The Metropolitan Club, winner of the championship in 1910, would not consent to race again unless hopples were barred, and none of the other four clubs was in favor of eliminating the straps just yet.

The Quannapowitt Club of Reading didn't feel its horses were quite good enough to compete against the other clubs of larger membership, while the Lynn Driving Club last week voted to race independently.

Thus the Dorchester and Fellsway clubs were the only ones remaining in the association who were anxious to continue the interclub arrangement of last season.

MARTEL-POEHLER WIN BIG MATCH

Martel and Poehler won the two-man candlepin championship of the world and the purse of $500 by taking the last block of ten strings to each man at the Murray and Irwin alleys, from Christopher and Galway, their excellent bowling more than overcoming the lead the last two had of four pins in the opening strings.

Fully 1,000 bowling bugs witnessed the match. In the first string last evening Martel and Poehler, by hitting the pins for 241 against 170 for the losers, thus gaining seventy-one pins and secured the winning lead. In this string Martel got 123, while Poehler got 118. Then in the second string, the winning team gained twenty-four pins more, they hitting the pins for 212 against 188, giving them a lead of ninety-five pins for the night's play in only two strings. Martel was high man with 118.

Galway and Christopher came back in the third and got 216 to 186, a gain of thirty pins. Galway got a nineteen spare, a fourteen spare and a seventeen spare, got a strike and put a spare on that for a total of 125.

Galway got a spare—put a strike on it and got 17 on the strike. He then made an 19 and an 18 spare. Paul brought up 1-2-3-4 and 10 pins for a 16 spare.

The seventh string Galway and Christopher gained another nine pins and brought the lead down to just thirty pins with 228 to 219. Galway was high man again with 118.

The eighth string Poehler and Martel came back like race horses and increased their lead from 30 to 65 pins, getting 204 to 169.

The ninth string Poehler and Martel increased their lead to 116 pins by walloping the candles for 245 to 194. Poehler got 132 and Martel 113. The final string Galway and Christopher cut the lead from 116 to 69, getting 241 to 194. Christopher rolled 139 in this string.

Poehler was high man for the night with 1,061, Martel 1,043, Galway 1,037 and Christopher 998. Poehler and Martel got 2,104 at Murray & Irwin's, while Galway and Christopher got 2,035—for the grand total, Poehler and Martel had 4,176 against 4,111. The score:

Christopher—86, 99, 91, 106, 96, 99, 110, 85, 88, 139—998.

DELMONT MIXES WITH ATTELL

Monte Attell of California, who meets Al Delmont of Boston, and Jack Dorman of New York, who meets Mickey McIntire of Sydney, N. S., in the double wind-up of twelve rounds at the Armory A. A. to-night, arrived in this city yesterday.

Attell has heard that Delmont is boxing in great form, but he does not feel alarmed, as he feels that a win from Delmont at the present time will make him all the better attraction with the public here.

This is Monte Attell's first appearance in this city, and he wants to uphold the reputation that he has made with the best boxers in the country. He is nearly as clever as his brother, Abe, the featherweight champion, who will be in his corner to-night to give him advice that may be necessary.

Delmont is confident that he will defeat the fast Californian, and will then issue a challenge to box Abe Attell, at 118 pounds, the weight Abe recently met Frankie Burns at. If Delmont boxes the way he did in his contest with Jimmy Carroll three weeks ago, he will have an even chance of winning from the wonderful Attell.

The match between Mickie McIntire and Jack Dorman should be a strenuous contest, as they are the kind of boys who stand toe to toe and swap punches. If this match goes the limit of twelve rounds, the members of the Armory A. A. will witness one of the best bouts ever put on here.

The two six-round bouts between Frankie Moloney of the West End, and Mike Conroy, the hard-hitting bantam from South Boston; and Eddie Carr of South Boston, and Jack Ladbury of England, will be put on in addition to the double windup. This show is made up of boxers in the bantam, feather, and lightweight classes and the boys in these classes always put up the most satisfactory contests.

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

RUSTLERS OUT TO-DAY FOR THE "BIG SHOW"

By R. W. LARDNER.

The change in ownership, management and makeup has made the Boston National League club a much more popular aggregation than it was one year ago. Then it was apparently deserted. To-day it has followers galore and its owners and managers have promised these followers their faith will prove well placed.

The Rustlers are fit if ever a team was. The Dodgers, with the exception of the important "Nap" Rucker, are just as fit. The team that loses the opening series will have nothing to say about lack of condition, for the members of both clubs are trained to the hour.

This year's Brooklyn bunch doesn't look as if it would be particularly weak against the southpaws, for it has in its regular batting order only two left handed hitters, Zack Wheat and Jack Daubert.

Undoubtedly Manager Dahlen had set his heart on starting Rucker to-day. Four of the seven men who are in the everyday batting order of the Boston lift swing from the left side of the plate. This means that a southpaw should more than hold his own against us. But Dahlen has not tried southpaws aside from the formidable "Nap," and he is out of it.

Behind the bat for the Brooklynites is Bill Bergen, the veteran. Dahlen has three catchers on his string, Erwin and Miller being the other two. Miller lacks experience and Erwin is a left-handed hitter and is saved to bat against the right-handers. Brooklyn will show us some new faces. Coulson in right field has been with the club before, but not long enough to allow the bugs to become acquainted with him. Bill Davidson is still in centre field and the formidable Zack Wheat in left.

The infield has Hummel at second and Daubert at first, but the other two positions are filled by new ones, Zimmerman having the third base job and Tooley, another Eastern Leaguer, being at short.

Rustlers Are Entirely New.

But the Rustlers have the edge in the matter of newness. Not one man of them, aside from the batteries, was last Spring in the position he occupied to-day.

To start with the head of the list: Josh Clarke was in the place formerly occupied by Bill Collins. Clarke is a left-handed hitter of no mean ability and one of the surest outfielders in the game. He is a brother to Manager Fred Clarke of the Pittsburg Pirates and his work in left field reminds one of the smooth action of the Pirate chief.

Wilbur Goode, centre fielder, was next up. Goode, like Clarke, is an ex-Clevelander. He was with the Naps in 1908 when they came so close to copping the American League pennant. Last year he was a Baltimore Oriole and virtually led the Eastern League in batting. He, too, is a lefthanded sticker.

Charley Herzog, the third in the list, is no novelty as an infielder, but the betting is that he will prove one of the "sensations" of the season as a shortstop. Boston crowds have not had a chance to see Herzog play that position, which is his natural one, regularly. They saw him to-day and wondered why any manager ever placed him anywhere else on the inner defence. "Doc" Miller was the regular Boston left fielder after he was traded to this team by the Cubs last year. It isn't necessary to say much about him. A natural hitter, he gives rich promise of developing into a champion.

Ingerton Has Made Good.

The fifth name on the card belongs to Scotty Ingerton, secured in another trade with the Chicago Cubs. Ingerton played such excellent ball at Altoona in the Tri-State League last Summer that no less than nine major league scouts were after him. On the Spring trip, Ingerton hit the ball ferociously and if he can only do half as well during the coming season, his berth is assured.

Bill Sweeney, last year's captain, to-day made his bow as a second sacker, and those who have watched him toil in the position are free in their predictions that William will prove one of the hits of the production. He takes to the task as if he had been born between first and second.

The scribes who have been South with the Rustlers have informed the public that Fred Tenney has "come back," so the good showing he is sure to make will not come as a surprise. Fred looks every bit as good as he did two years ago with the New York Giants, and he was good enough then to assist in the arduous task of keeping McGraw's team well up in the race.

In their journey through the Southland the Rustlers hit the ball in the most impressive manner possible. They hit good, bad and indifferent pitching and kept up a clip that drove the Southern hurlers to despair. Not a man in the regular line-up looked a bit weak with the stick. This hitting ability is bound to come to the surface even when the team is facing the best kind of pitching. The most conservative thing that can be said regarding it is that the Rustlers will outbat last year's Doves two to one.

As Manager Tenney says, it is now up to to the pitchers.

ZBYSZKO IS AGAIN AFTER FRANK GOTCH

NEW YORK, April 12.—Zbyszko, the Polish giant, is again ready to renew his efforts to get a match with wrestling Champion Frank Gotch. The ease with which the Pole put away Joe Rogers at St. Nicholas Rink shows that he has lost none of his strength or cunning. Zbyszko got two straight falls, the first in 1 hour and 4 minutes and 37 seconds with a crotch and half Nelson and the second in 14 minutes and 56 seconds with a crotch hold and bar lock.

WELSH AND MOORE IN RING TO-NIGHT

NEW YORK, April 12.—New York expects one of the best bouts of the season to-night, when Freddy Welsh, former lightweight champion of England, meets Pal Moore of Philadelphia before the National Sporting Club for 10 rounds in a real international scrap. Both are in fine shape. If Welsh wins he will challenge Packey McFarland upon the latter's arrival from Chicago to-morrow.

NEW YORK, April 12.—The Philadelphia Nationals came here for the opening game with the Giants on the Polo Grounds. New York fans are firm in their belief that Manager McGraw has strengthened his team wonderfully. They were anxious to look it over and will not be satisfied with anything less than two out of three games in this first series. Christy Mathewson, the Giants' best bet, was booked to pitch the inaugural game for the New Yorkers. Manager Dooin named Earl Moore to do the hurling for his club, so a great battle was expected.

CINCINNATI, O., April 12.—Manager Griffith's Reds opened the National League season of 1911 here to-day with the Pittsburg Pirates as opponents. More than the usual interest center in this year's opening, probably because of the big trade pulled off by Manager Griffith and the fact that so many new faces are to be seen on the Red team. The fans have quarreled all through the off-season regarding the player swap with the Phillies and now they are going to get a chance to see for themselves whether or not Griffith strengthened his aggregation through the exchange. McQuillan was booked to face the Pirates and "Babe" Adams was Manager Clark's choice.

CHICAGO April 12—Frank Chance's Chicago Cubs started to-day in another race for the National League pennant, and the feeling here in Chicago is that they will win it and thus establish another record. Ed Reulbach was named to pitch the first game against Roger Bresnahan's St. Louis Cardinals. Reulbach is in far better condition than at any time last season and his good shape is one of the things that makes Cub fans feel happy. Zimmerman had his first real try-out as regular third baseman in Steinfeld's place.

RUCKER INJURED, CAN'T PITCH TO-DAY'S GAME

Nap Rucker, the crack southpaw of the Brooklyn club and one of the best pitchers of that class in the country, was unable to twirl for Manager Dahlen's Dodgers for some time. In practice at Brooklyn Monday, Rucker sprained his ankle and will be out of the game for at least a week. Manager Dahlen had intended to pitch him in the opening game here to-day, but had to choose from Bell, Barger and Schardt, a new man.

DETROIT, Mich., April 12.—The time-honored rivals, Detroit's Tigers and Chicago's White Sox, inaugurated the 1911 race for the pennant at Bennett Park this afternoon. Special features were arranged as preliminaries to the game and a capacity crowd was looked for, although the weather has been anything but balmy. The quarrel between Ty Cobb and Sam Crawford is said to have been patched up and it is believed that harmony once more rules in the Jennings ranks. George Mullin was slated to pitch to-day's game for the Tigers, with Doc White as an opponent.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., April 12.—The world's champion Athletics entertained the New York Highlanders here this afternoon in the first game of the American League campaign. Jack Coombs and Jack Quinn were named to do the pitching. Hal Chase's team has some new men and local fans were anxious to compare it with Connie Mack's world conquerors. The champions felt happy over their victory in the series with the Phillies and they will not be content unless they take the series from the New Yorkers. Philadelphia is as near baseball crazy as it is possible for a city to be.

RED SOX LINE UP FOR WASHINGTON OPENING

By MERTON E. BURKE.

Well, they rang the bell in Washington to-day.

The Big League season is on.

The curtain has dropped over the finale of the "Coast-to-Coast" trip of the Boston Red Sox. The "Speed Boys" lined up against the Washington team to-day for the first battle of the league season.

Manager Donovan has a likely lot of Coast-trained youngsters to get out and do the work. Some of these people who didn't go to the Coast disapprove of Coast training trips, but when you read the scores you'll have to admit Coast-to-Coast junkets are every bit as beneficial as trips to Hot Springs.

Why They Went so Far.

There used to be a time back there when the real "old-timers" you read about were in the game that a trip to some sort of a "boiling out" place was necessary. But in these days when a ballplayer keeps in physical fitness the year round, conditions are different.

Some people have an idea that a ball-player must be an awful rough neck. There's Tris Speaker, for instance. A lot of people who don't know him might think he's a real tough customer. Maybe because he came from Texas and plays ball. When he got aboard the Red Sox special at El Paso after a trip into the war-infested Juarez and sprang a couple of rapid fire guns and enough bullets to shoot the whole insurrecto army, he did look fierce to me. But forget that tough guy stuff. Believe me, he's a kidder and as gentle as they make 'em. He also has fewer bad habits than most of Boston's Sunday school superintendents.

As a matter of fact, nearly all of John I. Taylor's squad of players are men who have won signal honors in colleges. Many of them have just completed their college courses and some are still studying.

Most of the boys, too, are youngsters, living at home in Winter and playing ball in the good old Summer time. Several have business interests for the Winter months. Oh, they are a busy, wise lot. If the bottom drops out of the baseball market they'll make good, never fear.

But to get back to the diamond.

At the end of the training trip Manager Donovan sends out his team with every assurance that they'll make good. He has coached and developed some of the boys in a fashion that will surprise Boston fans.

Lewis and Hooper Come Strong.

I look to see Duffy Lewis and Harry Hooper the sensations of the batting end of the game. Both are perfect fielders anyway, and their hitting has improved wonderfully this year. Tris Speaker you all know. Wait till the bases get filled up and there is some need of a little effort and he'll lambast a home-run for you without fail.

Wagner, aside from a little lameness in his throwing arm, is certainly a dandy little shortstop. You know him. Doesn't he cover about all the ground there is out there between third and second. Well, he's hitting 'em, too. Heinie is all right. There is never any question about his being in condition.

Larry Gardner seems to be playing his regular game at second. He has been hitting well and ought to hold his own handily.

The old first and third base problems which Manager Donovan has been wrestling with seem to have solved themselves. Clyde Engle, who started out in the game in Washington to-day, will hold down third until there is some apparent reason why some other man should have the job.

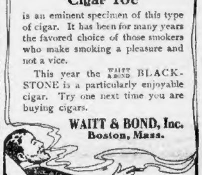

Of course, Harold Janvrin is in training for that post, and will be used occasionally as utility man there. Nebinger is also going at a good pace and ought to make second choice for third, should Engle not come up to the mark.

Williams Looks Good.

Alva Williams looks good on first. He is a wizard at stirring up the boys. He's a first baseman and a coach combined. Up to now he has been troubled about his hitting, but the way he goes at the ball leaves no doubt in my mind, or in Donovan's, either, for that matter if you must know, that Williams will make good.

All of this is not to the discredit of Hugh Bradley. "Brad" has been playing A No. 1 ball at first. He made a few errors out on the Coast when he was troubled with sore hands and was severely criticised. But I think that didn't count against him in Manager Donovan's estimation. Bradley is a hard worker and has been hitting much more heavily than Williams. That point may lead Donovan to give him the post.

Bradley always plays a very heady game in base running and I think might pull in a run where Williams would not. It's a friendly race between the two. Whichever wins first doesn't matter so much, for the other fellow will simply shift behind the bat, a position which is perhaps more in the lime-light than first base. Williams opened to-day in Washington because of Bradley's stiff knee.

Smoking Clear Havana Cigars

is an attempt to get more pleasure out of cigar smoking than there is in it. Your nerves and digestion pay the penalty for such mistakes. A cigar filled with a good grade of Havana tobacco, and wrapped with light, neutral Sumatra, is the most safe and satisfactory.

WAITT & BOND BLACKSTONE Cigar 10c

is an eminent specimen of this type of cigar. It has been for many years the favored choice of those smokers who make smoking a pleasure and not a vice.

This year the WAITT BLACKSTONE is a particularly enjoyable cigar. Try one next time you are buying cigars.

Jeff May Be Short on Courage, but He's Long on Judgment

By "Bud" Fisher

BOSTON BOXERS TAKE FOUR CHAMPIONSHIPS

In the seven classes of the National boxing championships decided at Mechanics Hall, four were won by Boston boys and three by those from New York.

The best fight of the night was the heavyweight bout between Joe Burke Cox of Boston, the runner-up in the championships last year, and Edward Beley, Jr., of Newton. Beley started out well and held Cox even for the first round and in the second round put the Boston man down twice for what looked like a sure wind-up. The third round the Boston man came out strong and with several well directed lefts to the head and jaw forced the Newton man to take the mat. Beley tried hard to come back, but Cox piled on top of him, landing lefts and rights to the jaw, scored a decisive win over Beley in the final round.

Johnny Fallon, in defeating Julius Lesster of New York, put up one of the best bouts of the evening and it was the only bout of the evening where any real science was displayed. Fallon's best blows were rights and lefts to the head and rights to the body. In his final bout Fallon won easy from Frank Brogan of Lawrence in three rounds.

Tom Regan of East Boston, who won the 115-pound class, met Harry Carlston of Brockton in the semi-final bout, which was a very timid affair for the first two rounds. Carlston was the most willing and chased Regan around the ring trying to mix it. In the third round Regan mixed it and made what was a very tedious bout at the start to watch, interesting. The judges awarded the bout to Regan, much to the disapproval of the crowd.

The 125-pound semi-finals were won by two New York boys. A. Kaufman, who defeated Johnny Miller of South Boston, and Frank Huffnagle stopped W. P. McNally of Roxbury. Huffnagle won the final bout of the class by default from Kaufman as the latter had broken one of his hands in his semi-final bout.

Ted Hodgdon, the New England 145-pound champion, took a hard beating in the final round in the 145-pound class, suffering a knock-out by John Fisher of the Avonia A. C. of New York in the second round.

The 158-pound finalists were N. Boutellier of Boston and John H. Craige of Philadelphia. Craige looked to be made to order for the Boston fireman, and after Boutellier had stabbed his left into Craige's face a few times, it looked and was plain to see that Craige was a defeated man.

The final bout of the evening brought Joe Burke Cox and John Sevrino of Boston together, Sevrino having won his way into the finals by putting away T. J. Dorsey of New York by the K. O. route in two rounds.

NATIONAL AMATEUR BOXING CHAMPIONS

105-pound class—Johnny Fallon, Boston.
115-pound class—Tommy Reagan, East Boston.
125-pound class—Frank Hufnagle, National A. C., Brooklyn, New York.
135-pound class—James Jarvis, Union Settlement A. C., New York.
145-pound class—John Fisher, Avonia A. C., New York.
158-pound class—Napoleon Boutellier, Boston.
Heavy-weight class—John Severino, Boston.

TOM LYNCH AT THE FIRST GAME

President Tom Lynch of the National League reached Boston this morning. He declined an invitation to lunch with President Russell and Vice-President Page of the Rustlers, saying he had an engagement with the two umpires who officiate here to-day, William Klem and John Doyle.

Mr. Lynch visited the Boston club's downtown office shortly after his arrival. He said he had heard great reports of the strength of Tenney's new team and was anxious to get a look at it. He is of the opinion that the Dodgers, too, are an improved bunch.

This was the executive's busy day. His date with the umpires was to be followed by a visit to the ball grounds and an inspection of the club house provided for visitors. He intends to make a personal inspection of all the visiting club houses in the league and they will have to meet his approval or be changed. The president also planned a brief talk to the ball players just before they were ready to take the field. He wanted to instruct them regarding their conduct on the diamond and to warn them that the umpires were going to be particularly strict this season.

President Russell had an engagement with "Peaches" Graham previous to starting time and there was a possibility that the great catcher would be persuaded to fall into line. In the event of his signing, he would be behind the bat in the opening contest.

Outfielder Sellers was given his unconditional release this morning. The club purchased him for $1,000 last Fall, but he failed to report.

The Rustlers met at the South End grounds at 10 o'clock and were given their new home uniforms. There was no practice, for the men were too busy unpacking trunks and getting suits to fit them.

SCHOOLBOYS IN BIG LIST GAMES

Not only is to-day the opening of big league ball season, but it is a big day for the schoolboy teams. Thirteen school games are scheduled [illegible] teams around Boston [illegible] of the schools outside of Boston [illegible] in their first games.

Cambridge Latin and Boston Latin meet on Rindge Field [illegible] and this is considered the leading game of the day. Boston Latin has a fairly strong team this season and [illegible] Cambridge [illegible] three fair pitchers in Pender, [illegible] Heyer, and one of them should make good this season. Cambridge [illegible] has a fair team and will put up a good game.

Medford High will meet Woburn High School on its home grounds and should win the game with ease. Medford is one of the strongest school teams around Boston and already the [illegible] have conceded the suburban pennant to them, although Somerville High, Everett High, Malden High and Melrose High have a little [illegible]. Medford is [illegible] in every position and is especially strong on the mound. Joe [illegible] and Davidson are two of the strongest schoolboy pitchers in the State and they are bound to make good. Both men twirled [illegible] game last season. [illegible] is a southpaw and has a very puzzling [illegible] the first strong man. Woburn has a fair team and will not give up the game till the last man is out.

Everett High will meet Stoneham High at Everett and a good game is anticipated. Malden High will play the Boston College High School team at Malden and should win the game. This is the first game of the season for Malden, but the Boston boys have played Melrose High and have been defeated.

Waltham High will battle with the Boston University freshman team at Waltham. Wakefield High will play Winchester High at Wakefield. Stone School will meet the Middlesex School at Concord and Melrose High will play the Dean Academy team at Franklin.

ANDERSON AND GOTZ TO BATTLE ON MAT

The wrestling match at the Columbia to-night should appeal to all lovers of good mat work, as it brings together two past masters at the game, Peter Gotz, the crack English welterweight, who has a long record of wins over some of the best men in the world and holds four championship belts as emblems of his prowess, and Sam Anderson of Norwood, claimant of the American middleweight championship and winner of the London tournament championship belt in 1908. Gotz is credited with having thrown Pat Connolly in two minutes, which is going some for a little fellow. He sails for home on the 18th, so local fans are fortunate to get this chance to see him in action against a man of Anderson's calibre.

BASEBALL NEWS NOTES

Baseball is now being played on the roofs of the skyscrapers. "It was a certainty," the baseball writer remarks, "that the game would ultimately reach a much higher place."

The Rustlers are prepared to put in claims for the many young players who will soon be on the market. At least 100 youngsters, it is figured, will before long be dropped by major league [illegible].

The [illegible] report [illegible] at hand that "Ty" Cobb is suffering from [illegible]. The chances are that his team mates are suffering from "Ty's" conceit more than he is himself.

Ex-Reds now in the Eastern League: Joe Kelley, John Ganzel, McMillan, McCabe, Roth, Miller, Lobue, Spade, Dolan, Wheeler and Joe Doyle.

Malachi Kittridge of the Saginaw, Mich., team, who has been trying to sign Catcher Andrew Konnick of Wilkes-Barre, has been disappointed. Konnick deciding upon the advice of his brother, Mike Konnick, to join the [illegible] team in the Central League, on which Mike has already been signed.

Honus Wagner is still diffident—hates to be pointed out on the street or in the hotel and dodges whenever possible.

SCHOOLBOY GAMES SCHEDULED TO-DAY

KLAUS IN DRAW WITH GARDNER

PITTSBURG, April 12.—Frank Klaus of East Pittsburg, and Jimmy Gardner of Lowell, Mass., fought a six-round draw before the Northern club at Duquesne Garden. Both men claimed to have had the best of the go, but local sentiment favored Klaus. [illegible]

Gardner was too clever for Klaus and [illegible]. Neither of the men seemed to have given or taken any good [illegible] at Gardner [illegible] could not land.

SUNDAY BALL BILL

COLUMBUS, O., April 12.—The [illegible] has passed the Greeves Sunday [illegible] bill [illegible] the other gives the city [illegible] liberty to say whether [illegible] shall be permitted [illegible].

TUFTS SQUAD STARTS

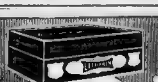

Manager Thompson of Tufts has [illegible] that the [illegible] Spring [illegible] trip early [illegible]. Smith and Davis will be carried as pitchers.

STOUGHTON WILL HAVE OUT TEAM

STOUGHTON, April 11.—Owing to the [illegible] league [illegible] Stoughton [illegible] season with two games [illegible] April 19 with a strong [illegible] under the management of John [illegible] known [illegible] of semi-professional [illegible] in New England at the present time.

[illegible] players that [illegible] big leagues. He has averaged [illegible] each year for the past five years. [illegible] now a candidate for first base for the Chicago White Sox. [illegible] of Brockton, former [illegible] Chicago White Sox [illegible], now captaining St. Joseph in the Western League [illegible] of the American Association [illegible] of the New England League.

With [illegible] as manager the local fans are assured of good [illegible]. He is ready to book games with the strongest semi-professional teams in New England on the home grounds during June, July and August and away from home dates during May. Communications may be sent to No. 21 Canton street, Stoughton.

Little Willie Receives a Pointer

By KENNETT HARRIS.

"OH, Willie," called the nice old gentleman. "I want to see you a moment if you have half an hour or so to spare. Eh? I thought that would make you giggle. It nearly always works. You see there are so many people in this world of ours that want to see you half an hour or so if you've just a moment to spare. Eh?"

The nice old gentleman chuckled with great enjoyment and the little boy grinned uncomfortably.

"Excuse me. I'm taking up your time," proceeded the nice old gentleman. "I was going to tell you [illegible] a treat in store for you. Your Great Uncle William is coming to make us a [illegible] visit. There! Throw up your cap and yell if you want to."

"Ma told me," said the little boy, unemotionally.

"Oh, she did? Well, did she tell you that you would have to be on your very best behavior?"

"Yes, sir."

"I thought it likely, but I wasn't going to let you take any chances if I could help it. Yes, you've got to toe the mark and keep your toes still, my dear child. You were named for your Great Uncle William, and he's richer than mud. Therefore, it behooves you. Did your mother go into particulars?"

A Large Contract?

"No, sir," replied the little boy [illegible].

"Just told you to behave? Well, that's about the size of it; but I think it would have been about as well to particularize. We all want your Great-Uncle William to get the impression that you are a fine, manly, polite, well-bred, high-principled little fellow. That's the contract you've got to fill. Think you can pull it through?"

"I guess so," replied the little boy.

"Happy confidence of youth!" sighed the nice old gentleman. "Well, here are some little admonitions that you will do well to heed. If you are spoken to, answer respectfully and as aptly as possible; but don't be too smart, and speak only when you are spoken to. If you are told to do anything in your uncle's presence, say 'Yes, sir,' or 'Yes, ma'am,' and hurry from the room as if you intended to do it. Understand?"

"Yes, sir," answered the little boy.

"That's the style," smiled the nice old gentleman. "Now, at the table. You must stop pounding with your spoon and yelling at the top of your voice for a second helping of pie. Wait quietly, with your hands in your lap until you are asked and then decline politely. You can always swipe a piece from the kitchen later on, you know. Get that?"

"U-huh."

"Yes, sir!"

"Yes, sir."

Plenty of Soap

"Cut out that 'u-huh' form of response and also the 'yep' and 'nope' that you are acquiring. Remember that. Also, you will do well to make a break for the suds as soon as you come into the house, and make your appearance with a clean face and neck and well-scrubbed finger nails. Do you think you can stand that for a week or ten days without committing suicide?"

"I guess so," answered the little boy.

"There mustn't be any guess work about it, Willie," said the nice old gentleman. "And there's another thing. You must refrain from comment upon the behavior of your parents."

"I don't know what you mean," said the little boy.

"Keep your mouth shut," the nice old gentleman translated. "If your father calls your mother, 'darling,' don't make any remarks or laugh. Don't appear to notice that he doesn't growl about the dinner and don't ask him [illegible] staying at home instead of going to the lodge. You may observe that he is strangely [illegible] and good natured [illegible] that it's none of your business if he is.

"And don't ask your dear mother what she is all dressed up for [illegible] she wears her silk waists. If [illegible] pets you a little more than common, take it as a matter of course. Don't make any remarks whatever or act surprised. That's all, Willie."

Making Uncle Happy

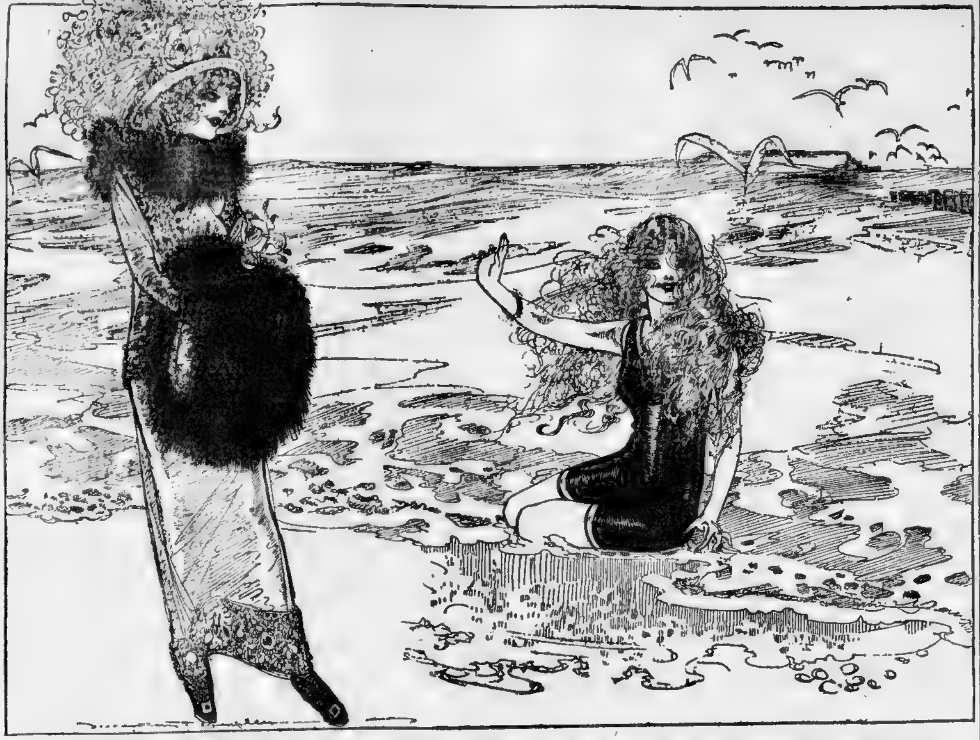

"Why?" asked the little boy.

"Because," answered the nice old gentleman. "You [illegible] understand when you get bigger. In a general way, we wish to make your dear Great Uncle happy because he hasn't [illegible] many more years to live, and he can't take any of it with him. If I hadn't had the foresight to [illegible] an annuity and spend the balance—Well, never mind. Just be good and keep your mouth closed."

The [illegible] up at his relative [illegible] "Are you going to behave very nicely [illegible]?" he asked.

Cold Days for Spring Dreaming — By Nell Brinkley

Copyright, 1911, by American Journal Examiner

I saw her—the Spring Girl—bundled up still in her Winter furs—because, I guess, of the fret for Summer in her veins—seeking the sea beach; and the sea was an old gray, cold gray sea, without a tint of Spring on its breast. And the girl and the rose in her jacket shivered, and she wondered, seeing a fancy of herself in bathing clothes in the wave-wash, "Can I EVER be lazing there again and not freeze stiff!"

Married Life the Second Year

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

In Which Helen's Mother-in-Law Makes a Formal Call on Her Mother.

HELEN had written a formal little note to Mrs. Curtis, her mother-in-law, saying that her mother was here from Missouri, visiting them, and that they would be glad to have her call.

She had done this only because she knew her mother would be deeply hurt if some of Warren's people did not come to see her, and because she did not wish her to know of the strained relations that had so long existed between Warren's family and herself.

It was almost a week after the writing of the note that Mrs. Curtis came. It was about 4 in the afternoon and, as Helen had taken her mother out sightseeing, they were both tired and neither of them was dressed. It was Delia's afternoon off, and Helen had to answer the bell herself.

The Meeting of Mothers

"Mother and I have been shopping and sightseeing all morning. So we've been very negligent this afternoon and haven't dressed," she apologized.

After a few commonplace remarks about the weariness of shopping and sightseeing, Helen excused herself for a moment to tell her mother that Mrs. Curtis was here.

"Hurry, and get into your black silk dress," she whispered. "Can you hook it yourself?"

"Oh, yes—yes, but it hasn't any ruching in the neck," excitedly. "I took it out yesterday to put fresh in, and then forgot it."

"Never mind the ruching—put it on and come in as soon as you can." And Helen hurried back to the front room, where she tried to entertain Mrs. Curtis with stories of the baby until her mother appeared.

"Mrs. Curtis—my mother, Mrs. Allen."

After the introduction there was an awkward pause. There is probably no situation more embarrassing to a young wife than that of the first meeting of her mother with her mother-in-law.

Uncomfortable Situation

Mrs. Curtis was most formal and cold. And Mrs. Allen, who had expected the warmest cordiality, was plainly disconcerted.

"I believe this is your first visit to Boston?" Mrs. Curtis asked formally.

"My first visit since I was here on my wedding journey; but that was so long ago, everything is so changed. It is like a new city to me now."

"Yes, I suppose so," murmured Mrs. Curtis, and then settled back and left the conversation to be directed by Helen and her mother.

Mrs. Allen was so plainly disconcerted that Helen tried to relieve her by talking rapidly of their plans for sightseeing while she was here. Mrs. Curtis made only an occasional polite assent.

And all the time Helen was painfully conscious that Mrs. Curtis was eyeing her mother's plain, old-fashioned black silk, which was in marked contrast to her own plum-colored walking suit and large hat with its nodding plumes.

And Helen resolved that before her mother returned this call she must have a new and modish tailored suit.

Poor Mrs. Allen, who had expected a very friendly family discussion of their mutual interests—their daughter and son—found instead that Mrs. Curtis was making only a most stiff and conventional call, in which there was no element of kinship or cordiality.

Helen was glad when Winifred woke up and began to cry. She at once brought her in, hoping to relieve the awkwardness of the situation. Mrs. Curtis held and played with her for a few moments, but not with the same loving tenderness which Helen's mother lavished upon her.

"Isn't that a dear little sack?" asked Helen. "Her Aunt Laura sent her that and mother brought her the daintiest little dress—I must show it to you."

She brought out the dress with a sense of pride, glad that Mrs. Curtis should see that her mother knew something of dainty baby clothes, even if her own clothes were plain and old fashioned.

"Yes, that is very pretty," murmured Mrs. Curtis, examining the fine handmade tucks, but without enthusiasm.

Here Winifred, who had been struggling protestingly in Mrs. Curtis's arms, began to cry.

"Let me take her," said Mrs. Allen, coming anxiously forward. And Winifred, who had already grown to love her Grandmother Allen, reached out her little hands.

Mrs. Curtis's Lecture on Babies

But Mrs. Curtis held her firmly.

"That's not the way to act! You mustn't cry like that! Good little girls don't cry that way."

But evidently Winifred had no desire, just then, to be a good little girl, for she only screamed the louder. Both Helen and Mrs. Allen wanted to take her, but Mrs. Curtis still held her firmly.

"I'm afraid you're spoiling her. It's just temper when she cries like that. Don't humor or notice her and she'll soon stop."

But Winifred showed no intention of stopping. And now Mrs. Allen, who could bear it no longer, stooped over and took her, in spite of Mrs. Curtis's protest.

Mrs. Curtis very carefully smoothed out her dress—which from holding Winifred was slightly creased—and said coldly, "Of course, if you wish to spoil her, you have only to humor her when she cries. But I never used that plan with MY children."

Almost at once, after this, Mrs. Curtis rose to go, inviting Mrs. Allen most formally to call on her.

It was several moments after she had left before any comment was made, and then Helen said:

"She Is Very Critical," She Said.

"I'm sorry Della was out—and we were not dressed. I always like to have everything right when Mrs. Curtis calls."

"Yes, she seems very—very critical," commented Mrs. Allen guardedly.

And that was all. With a world of things to say about this call, they said nothing at all.

Mrs. Allen had come to realize that there was much in her daughter's married life of which she knew nothing. But she also realized that for some reason Helen did not want her to know.

And not wishing to force a confidence that was not freely given, she now carefully refrained from any questions or comments.

Hail Columbia! An Englishman's Ode to Peace

THE following hymn, written by the Rev. Dr. J. Mountain of Tunbridge Wells, England, and which appeared in an English newspaper, is attracting wide attention in Great Britain.

It is entitled "Hail, Columbia, a Hymn to Peace," and is supposed to be the voice of Great Britain addressed to "the youngest of the great," the United States. The ode follows:

HAIL COLUMBIA! Noble Daughter!
Pride of Empress of the sea!
Britain greets thy lofty purpose—
All the world from strife to free.
Foremost in the world's inventions;
Pioneer in Freedom's van;
Yet a grander mission claims thee—
Peace to spread, and war to ban.

HAIL COLUMBIA! Clouds and darkness
Oft have shadows round us cast;
Now the "stars" that stud thy banner
Tell of light and hope at last.
President of Great Republic,
King of Britain's world-wide fame,
Grasp each other's hand in friendship,
Welding hearts that peace proclaim.

HAIL COLUMBIA! Now and ever
Thou and we shall be at peace;
Swords be sheathed and rifles silent;
Booming guns their slaughter cease.
One in blood, and one in language,
One in purpose we will be;
One in bonds of strong affection,
Severed only by the sea.

HAIL COLUMBIA! Heaven speed thee
Till the races of the world—
German, Russian, Turk and Latin—
Flags of peace have all unfurled;
War's loud thunders roll no longer,
Peace her brooding wing spreads wide;
Earth smiles wealth on lightened labor,
Seas no more brave hearts divide!

HAIL COLUMBIA! High thy mission!
None its issues vast foresee.
Surely, 'tis the world's Redeemer—
Prince of Peace—now moving thee!
Share we, then, with thee the glory—
Strife to banish, hate to quell;
Bring we in the ancient vision
Worlds in unity to dwell!

REFRAIN.

Thee we hail, Columbia!
Thou the youngest of the great;
Raise thy head, and front the nations—
Royal Peace thy Crown of State!

A Woman's Cry

OH, for the chance to soar! The daylight brings
The same small tasks to crowd my life again;
The years pass by me and my power has lain
So long chained it is dying. She who sings
Must know a life apart from little things
Or the ever-turning wheel thins her refrain.
One cleaves the sky, a million dot the plain
And in my heart I know that I have wings.
Vain, vain, but more, faint-hearted is this cry.
I chose the life myself: I chose to stay
Here in the plain with those my heart adores;
To make them happier, happier till I die.
To turn the wheel more smoothly every day—
Maybe, that is the way a woman soars.

Nothing Doing

AS the hospital ambulance dashed up to the curb and its surgeon sprang off into the curious crowd the patient on the sidewalk partially recovered from her fainting fit.

"I don't want to go to a hospital," she declared when she observed the approach of the uniformed doctor. "I'll be all right in a few moments; I'm not going in the ambulance."

"I don't want to go back without you if I can help it, madam," rejoined the physician, earnestly. "We ran down three persons to get here without delay!"

Pouch Bags

POUCH BAGS are cut with an oval bottom, covered with black velvet on one side and a bright-colored satin on the other. The top, which is joined to the bottom without fullness, is finished on top with black satin ribbon. It is lined with the satin.

The top has a draw string of satin ribbon through a casing, long enough to hang over arm. The lining may be in coral, green, burnt orange or royal purple.

THE WAR IN THE AIR

A Thrilling Story of the Invasion of This Country by a Hostile Sky Fleet. By H. G. Wells. Copyright by the Macmillan Company

Synopsis of Preceding Instalments

Bert Smallways, an English Cockney lad, in assisting at a rescue of a man and woman from a balloon, is caught in the basket and carried up alone 10,000 feet into the clouds. He is [illegible] of aeronautics. In rummaging [illegible] the basket he finds plans, blue prints, papers and letters which show that the man he aided in rescuing was Alfred Butteridge, the great air expert, who has invented the greatest airship known to history. It can sail the air and remain anchored in any spot in the heavens.

Bert remembers that Butteridge had offered his great secret to England for an enormous sum, and the offer was rejected. He finds letters that show Butteridge was on his way to Germany, where the War Department there awaited him.

Bert, after days in the balloon, finds himself sailing over a great camp. Soldiers shoot and bring down his balloon. It is the great [illegible] airship park of [illegible]. Bert [illegible] He finds they are preparing to send a great fleet of 100 airships to attack the United States, on whom they have declared war, and the expedition is in the hands of Prince Karl Albert. Lieutenant Kurt is told off to attend to the wants of Bert, in the belief that he is none other than Butteridge, the great air wizard.

When the air fleet starts for America Bert is on board the flagship Vaterland, commanded by Prince Karl Albert.

BERT parried that compliment a little awkwardly, and then the lieutenant was struck with the riddle why Herr Butteridge had not come in his own flying machine.

"It's a long story," said Bert. "Look here!" he said abruptly. "I wish you'd lend me a pair of slippers or something. They're rotten things. I've been trying the [illegible] friend."

"Right O!"

[illegible] scholar whisked out of the room and reappeared with a considerable choice of footwear—pumps, cloth bath slippers and a purple pair adorned with golden sunflowers.

But these he repented of at the last moment. "I don't even wear them myself," he said. "Only brought 'em in the zeal of the moment." He laughed confidentially. "Had 'em worked for me in Oxford—by a friend. Take 'em everywhere."

So Bert chose the pumps.

The lieutenant broke into a cheerful snigger. "Here we are trying on slippers," he said, "and the world going by like a panorama below. Rather a lark, eh? Look!"

Bert peeped with him out of the window, looking from the bright prettiness of the red and silver cabin into a dark immensity. The land below, except for a lake, was black and featureless, and the other airships were hidden. "See more outside," said the lieutenant. "Let's go. There's a sort of little gallery."

Flying Through the Night

He led the way into the long passage, which was lit by one small electric light, past some notices in German, to an open balcony and a light ladder and gallery of metal lattice overhanging empty space.

Bert followed his leader down to the gallery slowly and cautiously. From it he was able to watch the wonderful spectacle of the first air fleet flying through the night.

They flew in a wedge-shaped formation, the Vaterland highest and leading, the trail receding into the corners of the sky. They flew in long, regular undulations, great, dark, fishlike shapes, showing hardly any light at all, the engines making a throb, throb, throbbing sound that was very audible out on the gallery.

They were going at a level of five or six thousand feet and rising steadily. Below the country lay silent, a clear darkness dotted and lined out with clusters of furnaces and the lit streets of a group of big towns. The world seemed to lie in a bowl; the overhanging bulk of the airship above hid all but the lowest levels of sky.

They watched the landscape for a space.

"Jolly it must be to invent things," said the lieutenant. "How did you come to think of your machine first?"

"Worked it out," said Bert, after a pause. "Just ground away at it."

"Our people are frightfully keen on you. They thought the British had got you. Weren't the British keen?"

"In a way," said Bert. "Still, it's a long story."

"I think it's an immense thing—to invent. I couldn't invent a thing to save my life."

They both fell silent, watching the darkened world and following their thoughts until a bugle summoned them to a belated dinner. Bert was suddenly alarmed.

In the Great Presence

"Don't you 'ave to dress and things?" he said. "I've always been too hard at science and things to go into society and all that."

"No fear," said Kurt. "Nobody's got more than the clothes they wear. We're traveling light. You might, perhaps, take your overcoat off. They've an electric radiator each end of the room."

And so presently Bert found himself sitting to eat in the presence of the "German Alexander," that great and puissant prince, Prince Karl Albert, the war lord, the hero of two hemispheres.

He was a handsome blonde man, with deep set eyes, a snub nose, upturned mustache and long white hands, a strange looking man. He sat higher than the others under a black eagle with widespread wings and the German imperial flags.

He was, as it were, enthroned, and it struck Bert greatly that as he ate he did not look at people, but over their heads, like one who sees visions.

Twenty officers of various ranks stood about the table—and Bert. They all seemed extremely curious to see the famous Butteridge, and their astonishment at his appearance was ill controlled.

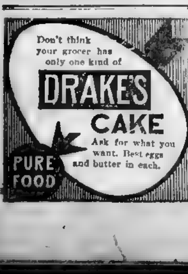

The prince gave him a dignified salutation, to which, by an inspiration, he bowed. Standing next the prince was a brown-faced, wrinkled man with silver spectacles and fluffy, dingy gray side whiskers, who regarded Bert with a peculiar and disconcerting attention.

The company sat after ceremonies Bert could not understand. At the other end of the table was the bird faced officer Bert had dispossessed, still looking hostile and whispering about Bert to his neighbor. Two soldiers waited. The dinner was a plain one—a soup, some fresh mutton and cheese—and there was very little talk.

A curious solemnity indeed brooded over everyone. Partly this was reaction after the intense toil and restrained excitement of starting; partly it was the overwhelming sense of strange, new experiences of portentous adventure.

The prince was lost in thought. He roused himself to drink to the Emperor in champagne, and the company cried "Hoch!" like men repeating responses in church.

Desperate Desmond

Aided and abetted by the wild men of Borneo, Desperate Desmond is about to subject Claude to a trial by fire. The villain is pouring kerosene over our brave hero to make sure that he will burn well. And what of Rosamond? Is she to stand by and see her lover roasted to death before her eyes?

No, dear reader, she is not. Desmond is rolling the barrel over a precipice, so that in case the fire does not utterly destroy Claude, the shock when he hits bottom will do the rest. Besides, the villain knows by experience that it is always a good plan to remove the corpus delicti from the scene of the crime.

Isn't it funny how we are always meeting Nimrod Jones, the Faunal Naturalist? This time he's out hunting rhinoceroses, or rhinoceri, as the case may be. Anyhow, he has a good chance of getting two of the beasts if they don't annihilate each other before the hunter can get in his deadly work.

Did you notice in the last picture that Claude in his barrel was falling rapidly toward the spot where the two rhinoceroses (we're pretty sure that's the proper plural) were due to meet? As you see our hero arrived on the scene at the psychological moment. Keep your eye on that fuse. It's burning down close.

Another minute, and it would have been all up with Claude Eclaire. Nimrod Jones extinguished the fuse just in time to prevent the kerosene from catching fire. Incidentally Mr. Jones gets the rhinoceroses, although that has nothing whatever to do with our story. However, there is no harm in telling you.

In the meantime, Desperate Desmond has placed Rosamond on a raft and is taking her away from Borneo. He has the wild man with him for company and also because he needs some one to do the heavy work connected with navigating his impromptu craft. If you want to know where he is going, see to-morrow's pictures.

It Made a Difference

When He Learned That Imp of a Boy Was Ill He Forgave All His Transgressions

"HAVE you been out in the front yard this afternoon?"

"No, why?"

"Oh, just because the contents of the flower beds have been scratched out, all over the walks. That's why!"

"Well, good gracious! I hope you don't think for a minute that I did it. I guess if you had supper to get and a hat to trim and a dress to turn you would realize that you had something else to do than scratch out flower beds, or to watch them, either, for that matter"——

"If the confounded hens would only put the gardens back after they have taken them out and scratched them it would not be so bad, but they scatter them all over the yard and then fly over the fence and leave them scattered."

That Boy Next Door

"Well, I can help it, and I am going to help it, too!"

"Now, don't do anything you will be sorry for."

"Then let those confounded chickens stop doing things that I am sorry for! I'll bet that if I ever buy another home I will be mighty careful to find out who owns the houses each side of it, and if there are any boys on either side it'll be nix on the buy for me!"

"Yes, he's an angel! When we tried to keep chickens he got a pet coon that got into our chicken house and reduced $9 worth of chickens to feathers, and I grinned like an idiot and told his mother that boys must have pets. Didn't I?"

"Yes."

"Now that I have gone to the expense of making a flower garden, nothing satisfies Mr. Fred but to get a lot of chickens!"

"Well, I'll see if something cannot be done about it in a day or two. I don't like to make any trouble while he is sick."

Doctor There Twice

"Sick?"

"Yes, sick."

"Who said he was sick?"

"His mother told me. And the doctor has been there twice to-day."

"What ails him?"

"Measles."

"Humph! A kid doesn't get very sick with the measles, does he?"

"Sometimes."

"I guess that's right—I read in to-day's paper where a baby died from an attack of measles."

"Fred's mother said his fever was up to 104."

"Pshaw! That's too bad. Run over, dear, and see how he is, won't you?"

"Why don't you go? I've got to finish getting supper."

"Aw, a man is too clumsy to be around a sick room. Have you got any of those quince preserves left?"

"A jar or two; why?"

Quince Preserves

"Take 'em over. I remember when I was a kid and getting over the diphtheria, the first thing mother let me have to eat when I began to get well was some quince preserves. You'll never know how good those preserves tasted to me. I don't believe I shall ever forget them."

"Well, I'll run over for a minute. You go and turn down the burner under the potatoes."

"And, dear"——

"Yes?"

"Tell him I'll take care of his chickens till he gets well."

"All right."

"And tell him I'll make him a kite while he is laid up. There used to be an old sailor in our neighborhood when I was a kid and"——

"All right."

"And tell him that I'll come over and tell him some stories as soon as he's better."

"Good gracious! I"——

A Guessing Game

"And tell him I'm going to bring him some sort of a toy from the ten-cent store every night, and he has got to try each day to guess what it is going to be."

"He'll be glad. Shall I say a word or two about the garden?"

"Good heavens, woman! Haven't you got any heart? Want do we care about a measly little eighty-five-cent garden? Why in the world don't you take things as I do and not work yourself into a passion over a little punk old garden? We want the boy to get well! Fred's the best little chap I ever knew."

Modern Miracles

By ADA PATTERSON

EVERY-DAY miracles! Who has not seen them? Water has not been changed to wine, seas have not been rolled back in this latter age of miracles, but individual wonders as great have been wrought, transformations in persons and conditions have taken place that can be classified only by the dictionary's phrase, "Events that seem to transcend human agencies."

Occasionally—not as often as we wish, but sometimes—we see the miracles of the reformed man. Present in my mind is the picture of a blear-eyed drunkard sitting before the soda water fountain in a drug store gurgling over his tapering-off drink so offensively that women and children turned away from the sight in disgust. The man was unquestionably taking a header on the toboggan to perdition. He had begun the habit which physicians have declared fatal, of mingling drugs with strong drink. He had been humiliatingly dismissed from his post of honor. His comfortable fortune had drifted out of his possession as sand between fingers. His wife had died of a broken heart. He had served a term in jail for a misdemeanor. "He is gone," said everyone who knew him. "He is gone," as though they were reading an epitaph. Yet this man has "pulled up." For three years he has led a life without blame, brimming with energy, rich in achievement. No one knows the reason. Perhaps not even the man himself. A miracle of these latter days!

There recurs, too, in the panorama of individual wonders the rejuvenated woman. We have all seen a woman passe, dispirited, accepting middle age, calmly preparing to mount the shelf. We have seen the same woman a month or a year later transformed, seemingly shorn of ten, fifteen or twenty years, and this not, as the searching midday sunshine will reveal, by any art of the beauty doctors.

It may have been by some change of a once fixed point of view, by some rekindling of the flame of an old ideal, by a renewed faith in person or principle, that middle age has dropped away and the graceful mantle of youth once more drapes her shoulders. But we do not know. She is not sure. Another every-day miracle has been wrought.

We see, too, the miracle of the buried feud. Last week I met in a crowd a girl of eighteen and a woman of twice her age. "This is my daughter," said the mother, with a look of wistful pride, her eyes telling far more than her tongue.

Six years ago the mother had separated from her husband, the father of the girl. A year later she had married a man as worthy as her first husband had been unworthy. The girl, under the influence of her scapegrace father, had chosen to remain with him, had sent a message that hurt to her mother. The mother, in heart-broken tones, had told me the story.

"I had to leave her father. My self-respect would not let me remain any longer with him. I brought my children with me and worked hard to support them. Then I met Mr. ——. He asked me to marry him. I told my daughter of it, and she advised me to marry him. Then her father poisoned her mind, and by taking her from me he has gone on with his continuous performance of breaking my heart."

Silence had followed. The mother's efforts to see her child had failed. A long brain fever had taken its toll of her strength. It had nearly taken her life. The years with their slow healing passed. And yesterday I met them together.

"She came to me yesterday. It was a surprise." The mother could say no more, for toes were crowding upon heels, elbows were jostling ribs in the human crush. But the eyes of the daughter, meeting those of the mother, were eloquent of the promise of reunion and of happiness, of lifelong understanding where there had been misunderstanding.

The Great Big Parade

It Is Made Up of Royal Chariots, Pushed by Queen-Mothers or Humble Retainers

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

WHEN the great big hands on the face of the clock of the seasons point toward Spring, there appears on the streets of Boston the Great Big Parade.

Of course, there are parades of various kinds all through the year; politicians with world-saving banners; members of churches and lodges get out in procession to show their strength; labor organizations give a hint of the power they wield by forming in line; patriotic societies carry banners, and there is always, in every season, the dress parade, but not one of these is the Great Big Parade.

The Little Royal Despot

The Great Big Parade is made up of royal chariots, each pushed by a queen mother, or a humble retainer of the royal family, and there rides in the chariot the king or the queen of the household, a tyrannical little despot who rules with a temper unmatched in the annals of kings and queens, with lungs as strong as those of a baseball fan.

It is the baby carriage parade!

In the coldest days of Winter, advance stragglers of the parade appear, couriers of the great army on the way; and the first warm days see these little royal despots out in full force.

They block the sidewalks, they congest traffic; they interfere with commerce and Congress is powerless; the queen mothers stop so often to exchange the gossip of their courts that the man of business affairs is forced to take the streets, and those women without chariots to push, who are travelling the Sour Way and refuse to swear allegiance to a little red-faced monarch in muslin and lace, threaten to retaliate by filling a wheelbarrow with bricks, and pushing a path through the royal equipages.

The first time His Highness appears he is feeble in the back, though not in the will, and rides reclining. He takes no greater interest in the faces of his subjects, who peer under his covers, than to blink his eyes in disgust, and when the foolish queen mother stops to listen to the compliments paid him, he gives a bawl, which, interpreted in the language of his new kingdom, means: "Move on!"

Sometimes affairs of state have gone wrong, and he takes his place in the parade with a right royal howl; his bath was too cold or too hot; a pin sticks him; the queen mother showed a treasonable amount of attention to other members of the household; he was pulled away from his dinner too soon, or a big giant scratched him with his whiskers.

"He is cross," the queen mother tells other queen mothers on the parade, and strange faces peer at him, and there is talk that is entirely too familiar regarding his teeth, his stomach and his legs and back.

Twin Despots on Parade

If this royal personage is queen, a big bow of blue ribbon on the coverlid is the insignia of her sex; but if a king rides there, the ribbon is of pink, and this method of discernment makes the king very mad. He thinks his sex should show in his royal countenance.

Sometimes, before his little legs are strong enough to bear him, he is ousted from his throne and made to walk, and a little red-faced usurper takes his place. It is in this way he learns the tragedy that darkened the life of his older brother, or sister, when he came.

It happened one day that a queen mother, taking part in this great big parade, pushed twin despots in a chariot and led by one hand a recently deposed monarch, aged two.

As she halted the parade, while she gave the dual sovereigns their pacifier, and wiped the nose of the deposed monarch, she heard two girls who were passing talk of their orations for Commencement Day.

"And just to think," said the queen mother, staring after them, "that it is only four years since I told in my commencement oration of my plans to reform the world."

The House With No Address

CHAPTER XI.—(Continued.)

"IT'S all right," she said soothingly; "they're down at Wood House. Uncle Moses sends his motor down with us sometimes after the performance. At first I thought I'd give up the Wood House altogether—and then I couldn't bear to, after all. But I haven't cared to go since. . . . But it's good for them, and I insist on their going."

"When will they get back?"

"Oh—in two or three days."

"Do you mean," he said slowly, "that there's no one else in this house but you . . . but us? That there won't be?"

"No," she said, "not any one else. It's home, dear—only you and me."

Through her thin bodice he could feel the sweet warmth of her body. Her breast heaved quietly against his breast. She put her arms to his neck and drew his lips to hers. They stood so, till it seemed to him that the beating of his heart was so loud that she must hear it, even through the self-righteous tick of the carriage clock on the mantlepiece.

They were alone—they were alone in that quiet house, safe shut in—no one else anywhere, in any of the rooms. They were betrothed lovers; in a few days—to-morrow if he chose—they would be man and wife. And her arms were around his neck, their faces touched.

"Sandra," he said hoarsely. "Sandra, Sandra."

"My love," she answered. "Oh, my love! I have prayed God to give you back to me—and now He has. I didn't think He would. I didn't really believe in prayer. Oh, my love—I believe in it now."

He kissed her lips, her forehead, undid the clasp of her arms about his neck and kissed her hands.

"Dear—dear, dear one," he said, "this is our magic palace. We aren't man and woman: you're an enchanted Princess, and I'm your slave."

"You're my Prince," she said, and drew up his hands to lie under her chin.

Templar took some credit to himself for being able to say, in quite a natural and hearty manner:

"Princess, your Prince is at death's door. He has had nothing to eat since breakfast."

You know the pretty moan of pity for your sufferings—remorse for her neglected hostess duties—resolution to ease your pangs instantly, at whatever cost to herself or the world, with which the woman who loves you receives your announcement that you are hungry? If you do not know it you have never been whole heartedly loved by a woman.

The Meal Together

"There—the spoons and things are in that big inlaid box on the sofa table. Yes, the bread here. There are some chocolates over there—on that silver box—yes. Let's have the lily in the middle of the table. Isn't it wonderful for us to have a table with a lily in the middle of it? We've always eaten out of doors before, sitting with our feet in wet ditches, like tramps!"

The emotion that had shaken him to the soul, had just touched hers with the tips of light fingers, almost unfelt, wholly unrealized. And it was that touch that changed her mood from deperate clinging tenderness to a wild child-like gaiety.

"The big armchair for you—that's where the master of the house sits. The little Eugenie one for me, so that I can be a humble mouse and catch all the crumbs. Very well—one glass is enough. What a good thing we haven't got a butler. He wouldn't approve. When we engage our butler we'll make it a condition that he shall always let us drink out of the same glass."

The worst of saying you are hungry when you are not, or of telling any other lie, for that matter, is that you have to live up to it.

Sandra heaped chicken on his plate—like all women, Sandra adored chicken—and it was not the chicken's fault if it tasted to him like sawdust.

But there was a satisfaction in waiting on her; and the gentle intimacy of the meal eaten together helped him in more ways than one.

They cleared the table, and the carriage clock announced with some asperity that it was 1 o'clock.

"Ought I to go?" he made himself say.

She opened reproachful eyes.

"Oh, no," she said, "unless you're frightfully tired. Do you want to go?"

His eyes answered her.

"Then don't. Indeed, you mustn't go. There are so many things to say."

She curled herself in the corner of the sofa and held out a hand to him. He took it, and leaned back in the sofa's other corner, their locked hands at long arms' length between them.

"You saw it in the papers," he said.

"No—it was a letter—I'll show it to you."

She drew it warm from her bosom.

"How would you carry it there?" he said, without meaning to.

"It was the only safe place," she said simply—"and it's not from him, you know. It's from a woman."

Written on cheap, dull, black-edged paper, the letter said:

"13 Andover Terrace,
"Stoke Newington.

"Madam, I regret to inform you of the death of Mr. Saccage, who has lodged with me for some years.

"He was taken ill about ten days ago, double pneumonia, and from the first the doctor said no hope. He suffered a great deal, but most in his mind.

"When delirious he talked constantly of you and seemed a prey to regret the way he had treated you. He exacted a promise from me to write and tell you he died repenting his sins and begging your forgiveness. Again and again he said, And I hope she will marry at once—why should she delay an hour? I have stood in her way too long.

"Of course, it is none of my business, but he said over and over he would not lie quiet in his grave till you were happy and married to the gentleman of your choice.

"Excuse me mixing myself up in your affairs, but it is not my choice, and I am sure his words when unconscious would have touched any heart. He desired me to send you a packet of letters which I will send registered as soon as I can find them.

"Your photo is to be buried on his heart. He said he always loved you, though treating you so harsh on account of his jealousy and you being so cold to him.

"I do not pretend to understand what it is all about, but no doubt you will know. Yours obediently,

"MARTHA CLITHEROE."

"I must be rather horrid," she said, leaning across to rub her cheek against his shoulder, "because when I read it I couldn't feel a bit sorry for him. I do now. Perhaps he really was fond of me."

Wishing He Were Dead

"I dare say he was," said Templar grimly; rose, and put the letter on the table. Then he sat down again in his corner. Sandra had already returned to hers.

"I suppose it's almost as bad as murder to wish somebody was dead. Do you know, I've prayed that he might die. That night I went home and prayed* * * and now he's dead. * * * It isn't really wicked, is it? Not really. You know how horrible he was that night."

She had drawn her hand from his and was twisting it with its fellow, on her knee.

"What night?" he asked, remote in his corner.

"The night after—after I'd lost you—oh, I forget you don't know. We haven't told each other anything, really. I don't want to talk about it."

"Do you mean you've seen him again? Spoken to him? Allowed him to speak to you?" His face had changed, darkened, his features seemed thickened and swollen.

"I * * * I couldn't help it. He would have come to the house and made a row. It was very late that night. There was a letter from him. I went out and met him * * *."

"You went out and met that man? Alone?"

"I took my little revolver—I'd gone to bed, after I came home from seeing you. I was tired, ill * * * I don't know. And I told the others to go to bed and leave some supper for me. And it was awfully late when I went down to get it. Wasn't it horrid of me to be hungry? But I was. And there was his letter—I had to go out and meet him!"

"Were you dressed?"

"Of course I was dressed. Why are you like this? What is it?"

"I hate to think of your being alone with that man—go on."

To Be Continued To-morrow.

Beauty Hints

To the Beauty Editor: Can you tell me of any harmless way to increase the bust? I do not want any more flesh on the hips or other parts of my body, but I am so flat chested I would try anything you thought would give me even two or three inches more development. ANNA R.

The only thing I know of that will develop the bust without increasing the size of the hips, or without putting on flesh where not needed, is a prescription put up by The Dr. Kelly Co., especially for small and undeveloped breasts. It is the discovery of a woman physician whose practice was largely among her own sex and in most cases increases the bust measure four to six inches in a month. Send 10c to the Dr. Kelly Co., Dept. 21 D. A., Buffalo, N. Y., and they will send you a trial package of the treatment without charge. This is said to be of great value in cases of arrested development of the bust and will give a full, beautiful form without anyone knowing that the treatment was used.

Many mothers have told me that after the baby had been weaned, the breasts became flabby and shrunken, but the use of Dr. Kelly's prescription made them full and firm. Do not use pads or bust forms, as they never look natural and have a bad effect upon the general health. Neither would I recommend ordinary flesh builders or tonics, as they increase the hips and limbs and with the present styles the form should be slender everywhere except a generously developed bust.

To the Beauty Editor:
How can I restore the youthful color and looks of my hair? It is getting gray and streaked and makes me look much older than I am.
Mrs. G. P. W.

Many women ask me for some practical and safe way to restore the color of their hair and my invariable answer is to get 50c or $1.00 worth of Butan gray hair restorer from Houghton & Dutton's or Jaynes Drug Stores. It is perfectly harmless, restores the natural color with one application, leaves the hair soft and fluffy and its use cannot be detected.

Gold Dust

Makes Pot and Pan Spick and Span

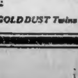

Soap and muscle won't clean your pots and pans properly—thoroughly.

GOLD DUST is a sanitary washing powder that not only removes the visible dirt and grease, but digs deep after every trace of germ life—sterilizes pots, pans, pails and kettles—leaving them clean, wholesome, safe.

Shake a little GOLD DUST in your dish-water and see the startling results.

GOLD DUST is sold in 5c size and large packages. The large package offers greater economy.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

IRREGULAR TONE IN WALL STREET

NEW YORK, April 12.—The stock market opening to-day was irregular, with Missouri Pacific again the principal object of interest. This stock opened ⅛ lower than last night's close. Traders to-day talked of a large issue of preferred stock by Missouri Pacific. It is evident that the present stock is not so plentiful in the Street as formerly. The opening price changes were fractional. Erie was up ⅛, Amalgamated Copper up ⅛, United States Steel up ⅛ and Consolidated Gas ⅛.

Reading was off ⅛ and Union Pacific off ⅛. Southern Pacific was unchanged. Steel showed firmness, although traders were bearish. Union Pacific, after selling off, easily recovered some of its loss.

The curb market opened firm.

Although Americans in London were quiet, there was a firm underlying tone. Canadian Pacific showed exceptional strength there.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

The general speculative mind in State Street refuses to be comforted with anything outside of the Supreme Court decisions and persists in waiting for them. It will not consider favorable crop reports, continued ease in money, assurance of reciprocity with Canada or improvements in various lines of business.

$ $ $

Those who are somewhat timid and a bit fearful are not of the opinion that this is a good level from which to start a boom in the securities market, for the reason that the average is too high. The margin of safety over dividend requirements is much greater now than it was in 1904, for instance, when the advance started after the United States Supreme Court rendered its decision in the Northern Securities case. It had been taken for granted at that time that if the decision was against the merger the bears would make a fight which would forever put the bulls out of business.

$ $ $

Bargain hunters have begun to make their appearance and in many parts of the Street this is taken as a sure sign that all is not lost. The bargain hunter has a particularly sharp scent and when he comes down into the speculative district the bulls take heart. Not that he is not mistaken sometimes; not being infallible, he often is, but he never begins to poke around until the clouds have lightened somewhat.

$ $ $

Dullness in the stock market has almost reached the point where something is going to happen if the action of the list can mean anything. Prices are being tested here and there in a cautious manner by the organization that has for weeks been trying to cover its short commitments. The selling is done so carefully that it is made to look like the liquidation of investors, the idea being to create the impression that investors are trying to slip out of their stocks.

$ $ $

The copper stocks are quietly sliding down toward low record prices without attracting much attention. The unfortunate feature of the copper share market is that many of the operators responsible for the development of high-class new mines, whose stocks are really worth more than their market quotations, have allowed themselves to be hypnotized into purchases of Amalgamated and Anaconda. The result is they have been crippled to such an extent that they are unable to take care of the good copper stocks. The public is likely, therefore, to get an opportunity to buy some real copper stocks at bargain prices.

FREE TEXAS HOTELS FOR SENATOR BAILEY

FORT WORTH, Tex., April 12.—Senator J. W. Bailey and Governor O. B. Colquitt hereafter will be denied the privilege of paying their bills while stopping at Texas hotels. The order went forth to-day from the headquarters of Colonel Burke Burnett to the Westbrook and the Seybold hotels in this city and to other hotels over the State that when Bailey and Colquitt are guests their bills be forwarded promptly to him for payment. The colonel is a multi-millionaire and owns the largest cattle ranches in the world.

FRED L. CLEMENTS, FISH DEALER, DEAD

Flags on T Wharf are at half mast to-day for Fred L. Clements, who died suddenly of cerebral hemorrhage at his home on Magnolia street to-day after a brief illness from a cold. He was at work as usual yesterday. Mr. Clements, who was sixty years old and a native of Yarmouth, N. S., had been a member of the Barkley-Clements Company, commission merchants on T Wharf, for twenty-six years. He is survived by a widow and one daughter, Mrs. Edward Griffin of Canton.

NEW BARBERS' UNION CHARTER IS HELP UP

The question of issuing a union charter to the Italian-speaking barbers of Boston still remains unsettled, notice being sent them to-day by the old-time Boston Barber's Union that the matter was laid over at last night's meeting for a final vote on Thursday, April 25. There are about 1,100 Italian barbers in this city. They want a union of their own, but their application must first be approved by the local before it can be granted by the general officers.

$110 BUTCHER'S OUTFIT Horse, Wagon and Harness at a Bargain

CONSISTS of a dark bay horse, age 7, wt. 1,226, fat and in good condition, and cost me one year ago, green $200; he has good, sound, solid feet and limbs, and is able to pull 2 tons anywhere, is a good, fast walker and free driver, does not need any whip to road about 7 or 8 miles per hour, and will stand anywhere, as he is used to automobiles and electric and steam trains; is worth $200 to-day to any one looking for an all-round horse, in the city or country; I will allow 10 days' trial on him; also a butcher wagon, fully equipped with boxes in front for vegetables, in back for meat, and also a corned beef box, all in good repair; also express harness, cost $35 new; if you want a bargain come and look at this team, as I want to stop the board. Can be seen at boarding stable, 1233 Columbus av., Boston, Roxbury Crossing; take any Roxbury Crossing car from North or South stations, ask car conductor, opp. Roessle Brewery; ask to see Mr. H. A. Smith's team. P. S.—Will sell separate.

$85 Buys Princess Wilkes
HANDSOME CHERRY BAY, foaled in 1903, weight about 1,075 lbs., round turned and shapely built and very handsome, is standard bred and registered, is a natural roadster of 9, 10 or 11 miles an hour, and has been trial miles in 2:16 and 2:16¼ over a half-mile track; she has also been halves on the speedway in 1:03; for a brood mare her breeding cannot be beat, as she is sired by a grandson of George Wilkes; breeding furnished to purchaser; she has not a blemish of any kind, is perfectly fearless of all objects on the road, is very well mannered, and will drive with open bridle; I think if she were properly trained and handled she would trot close to 2:10, as she has not been handled for speed since she was 4 years old; anyone looking for a first-class speed, family or road horse she is worth $300 to them; I will allow 30 days' trial to anyone who buys her; the reason I am selling is I have purchased a racing automobile; for further information, call at my residence. Money to Loan.

SEVEN REASONS

Why you should borrow from us: 1—You need no security, just your plain note; 2—You do not need an indorser; 3—We will forfeit $100 to a charitable institution if we notify your employer or friends of your intention to borrow from us; 4—You can get your loan at once; 5—You can pay it back in small payments; 6—You don't ride in an elevator where you are liable to meet your employer or friends; 7—Last, but not least, we only charge you 1 per cent. interest on each $1 you borrow from us up to $100; with a written agreement not to charge you said interest if you are dissatisfied. Come and talk it over in our private office. WAGE EARNERS' LOAN ASS'N, 10 State st.

We Are All Too Much Inclined to See Defects — Individual and National

But in the Long Run Fair Play Prevails

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal Examiner.

Our good friend Frugone, editor of the Bollettino Della Sera, writes a protest, and a just one. He says that Americans are following with deepest interest the Camorra trial and talking of that—as though it represented REAL ITALY—yet paying no attention to the great exposition just opened in Italy, or to the other REAL work of the Italian people.

Good friend Frugone, your complaint is just, and we are glad to publish it. There is a great deal of stupidity published and believed in this country concerning the Italian people. Many lies and much nonsense are told concerning the Black Hand—which, at its worst, is usually a neighborhood quarrel about an Italian grocery store and which usually is magnified at least one thousand times.

But, you know that this newspaper at least has repeatedly and as energetically as possible told millions of readers what the Italian people really are, and these statements of truth have been published in Mr. Hearst's newspapers everywhere—in Boston, Chicago, New York, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Intelligent Americans understand the character and the value of the great Italian nation. The ability and genius of Rome persist to-day in the people of Italy. The glory and power born on the Seven Hills to spread all over the earth are as great as in the old times.

The nation that gave to the world Caesar and Cicero, Dante and Michel Angelo, Christopher Columbus and Marconi, need not worry itself about the misunderstandings and the insults of ignorance. And no self-respecting Italian need feel anything but deep pride in his nationality and his historical inheritances. He may, on the contrary, point with good natured pity to Americans or any others so ignorant as to ignore Italy's glorious history and the great power of the Italian people.

You will find Americans as thoroughly misunderstood by Italians in Italy as you will find Italians misunderstood by Americans here.

And while it is true, as you say, that America is all ears and eyes for the cage full of howling murderers at Viterbo and has only too little thought for the expositions in Rome and Turin—so also it is true that in Italy there will be eagerly read descriptions of the burning alive of some negro, or a similar sporadic atrocity, and comparatively little attention for our industrial and scientific achievements.

Good friend Frugone, keep on fighting for your people, for their good name and for fair play. We respect you in the fighting, and will be glad to help you. But let us not take too seriously the insults and general foolishness of ignorance, remembering that while intelligence is a minority, yet intelligence is also POWER, and rules in the end.

"Impossible to Stop Sending Guinea Pigs"

That Is the Only Answer That We Can Make to Mr. Smith, Who Has Our Deepest Sympathy

Some time ago, in one of our sermonizing and rather dull editorials, there appeared this line addressed to the public in general:

"Are you quite sure that you don't do too much talking and too little thinking?"

Dear Sir—I am sure you are doing too much talking and too little thinking.

It would be time you should stop your nonsensical writing for a few years. You surely bore the people to their heart. I dare you to publish these few words. CHARLES SMITH.

Probably Charles Smith thought that he was writing an angry letter, and one that would stir up anger. He never was more mistaken; he shall have the softest answer that ever turned away wrath.

To suggest to a newspaper man that he should stop writing is like suggesting to old Sisyphus that he should stop rolling the stone and play croquet; or like suggesting to Tantalus that he ought to go and live in that nice watering place just outside of Venice, Italy, and take a swim every day; or like telling the imprisoned nightingale that it ought to break the cage and go out into the woods.

Good Mr. Smith, your style proves that you are familiar with all kinds of writing. You know the saying, "The heart knoweth its own bitterness."

Well, Mr. Smith, the heart that knoweth its own bitterness better than any other heart is the heart of a regular professional, every day writing newspaper man.

Did you ever, when you were small, invite another boy to go fishing and have him answer, "Can't, I've got to weed the garden"?

If you did, you know how a newspaper man feels when you invite him to "stop your nonsensical writing." He would like to oblige you, you may be sure.

The editorial heart knows its own bitterness, and it knows even better than Mr. Smith that it does talk too much and think too little. But each must do the work that is before him and talking in newspapers happens to be one kind of work. It is a sad kind of work, especially when you often suspect the truth of Mr. Smith's artless saying, "You surely bore the people to their heart."

It is a sad thing to "bore the people to their heart," especially when you must go on doing it anyhow. Mr. Smith probably has read "Pigs Is Pigs," and if he has, he will accept in good part the fact that when he asks us to stop writing and boring people to their hearts, we can only answer like the hero in "Pigs Is Pigs":

"Impossible to stop sending guinea pigs."

It is impossible to stop writing, once you begin.

THE INCOME TAX; WHY IS IT NECESSARY?

Written for the Boston American

By Dr. C. H. Parkhurst

It is always proper, even for the most unenlightened, to ask questions. It may therefore be permitted to one who has only as much of little knowledge of national finance as the majority of people to inquire out of what urgent necessity has sprung the Income-tax amendment to the Constitution enacted by Congress now under consideration by the several State Legislatures.

Taxes are mounting up among us inordinately, and the unfortunate part of it is that upon the poor very much of the pressure ultimately rests.

The wealthy can bear it without suffering in consequence any diminution of their luxuries. The poor, on the other hand, CANNOT bear it without suffering a diminution of their necessities.

Overtaxation is the mother of discontent, and discontent, among the less privileged classes, readily ripens into Socialism.

We believe that there prevails among all classes, the poor as well as the rich, sufficient patriotism and appreciation of our American privileges to make us willing to contribute our share toward meeting all the legitimate expenses of government.

But we also believe that a considerable portion of our national expenditures are illegitimate; that appropriations are made in entire indifference to the actual needs of the country and to the burdened condition of the ultimate sufferers, and that our national government ranks among the most wasteful organizations anywhere existing on the face of the globe.

So that to increase taxation and to devise one new means after another of wringing thousands of dollars out of the wealthy, and single dollars out of the poor, simply means giving to Congress fresh opportunities for being extravagant and spendthrift.

Wayne MacVeagh a month or more ago addressed an extended letter to President Taft which subsequently appeared as an article in the columns of the North American Review—a letter to which, so far as we know, no answer has been returned, and which contains points that could hardly be met in a way to satisfy oppressed taxpayers.

How, for example, will such taxpayer be impressed by a paragraph like the following, taken from Mr. MacVeagh's letter: "It was very creditable in Senator Aldrich to confess that, under the administration of Mr. Roosevelt and of yourself, $300,000,000 were being wasted by each Congress?" Or, again, "$100,000,000 could be saved, in pensions alone, if only those deserving pensions received them; but if a single deserter from the colors during the Civil War, or a single miscalled 'Spanish War veteran' mallogering in camp at Chickamauga, or a single worthless young woman who beguiled an old soldier with one foot in the grave into marrying her is not on the pension list for life, it is wholly due to some oversight on the part of the pension agents.

Hundreds of Bills to Remove Records of Desertion

On the first day Congress reassembled, December 5, 1910, less than a dozen bills dealing with proper matters of legislation were introduced in the House and 630 bills were introduced removing records of desertion so as to pension deserters or granting new pensions or increasing pensions already granted, and on the next day again less than a dozen bills dealing with proper subjects of legislation were introduced, and 380 bills were introduced removing records of desertion so as to pension deserters or granting new pensions or increasing pensions already enjoyed; and all this more than forty-five years after Lee surrendered."

Or, once again: "Then consider what could be saved if the appropriations for naval and military purposes were made in a spirit of economy instead of waste.

"In 1865, in the midst of the Civil War, when our navy was blockading the coast from Maine to Texas and pursuing the Confederate cruisers on every sea, the entire cost of the naval establishment was $63,000,000. In 1910, in time of profound peace, without an enemy in the world or the possibility of an enemy, the cost of the navy was $130,000,000.

"In 1865 the cost of the army was $24,000,000, in 1910 it was $100,000,000, and so throughout the long decreasing list of waste, still waste and still more waste, showing, as has been said, a kind of insanity of throwing away the taxes wrung in a considerable part from the unskilled and inarticulate men, women and children who are already living in a destitution of which we all ought to be ashamed."

That a letter of this kind should be written by a man like Wayne MacVeagh, openly addressed to the President of the United States, printed in as responsible a magazine as the North American Review and made its leading article for the month, means that there is a good deal in it.

If Kept Up May Prove Too Great a Strain for Us to Bear

It is an indictment which, if unrefuted, should be taken home to the heart of the President and to the serious consideration of all who the implicated in the charge of dealing thoughtlessly with the people's money.

To play with money that is not one's own, even if done under forms of legality, is theft, and, if carried beyond a certain point, may become too heavy a burden to be borne by popular endurance and subject to a perilous strain our existing social relations and governmental institutions.

I love everything that's old; old friends, old times, old manners, old books, old wine. GOLDSMITH.

A Forty-Day Saint

By JAMES RAVENSCROFT

She isn't wearing sackcloth—
That, of course is understood—
But she looks for all the world as if She'd wear it if she could.
The style will not permit of
Abnegation so complete,
But she garbs herself austerely
From her halo to her feet.
A nun-like meditation
Has becalmed her pretty face,
But, knowing she's an angel
And nowise in need of grace,
A wicked thought has tempted me
And simply will not down—
I think her meditations
May be on an Easter gown!

She's so divinely distant
In these solemn Lenten days,
And more and more a marvel
In the mystery of her ways,
You'd think she had renounced the world
And flesh for good and all;
Foresworn her faithful worshippers
She lightly holds in thrall;
For the rapt illumination
Of her beatific eyes
Is as if her inner vision
Had beheld the hidden skies.
But still the same thought tempts me,
And basely so at that—
Perhaps she sees the glories
Of a gorgeous Easter hat!

'Twas the customs sleuths that got 'em in bad.
